

US May Break Up Red Stall

Dean Informs Reds They Can't Bully Him Into Accepting Russia As Neutral

PANMUNJOM (U. S. envoy Arthur H. Dean threatened today to break off the tottering preliminary Korean peace talks unless progress is made in a reasonable time and meanwhile, the Allied delegation prepared to head home for Christmas.

"It is apparent that the American delegation will be out of here before Dec. 21," one high source said. "Our boys are packing."

Communist insistence on Russia attending the peace conference as a neutral observer rather than as a voting participant has stalemated negotiations to arrange the peace talks.

Dean told the Reds he would not be bullied into accepting Russia as a neutral and warned that he would continue the negotiations only as long as there is a "reasonable chance" of success.

He said he had full authority from the 17 Allied nations he represents to walk out whenever he feels there is no chance of reaching agreement.

Meanwhile, another 30 South Korean war prisoners who refused repatriation to a neutral country affirmed their decision to remain under Communist rule.

Allied explainers have talked with 220 ROK prisoners without getting a single one to change his mind. Thirty of the 108 remaining to be interviewed will be called up Thursday.

When the South Koreans are completed early next week, 22 Americans and 1 British who stayed with the Communists will appear before Allied explainers. One high American official has predicted that five or six of the Americans will decide to return home.

No apparent progress has been made in the preliminary peace talks since they began Oct. 26. The Reds rejected outright today for a second time a "final" plan handed them yesterday by Dean.

This proposal would seat Russia at the conference and require her to assume full responsibility for complying with the terms of a treaty.

Dean also suggested inviting neutrals with experience in Korea to attend as nonvoting observers with limited rights to take part in debate.

South Korea, which boycotted yesterday's session because of objections to Dean's proposal, was represented again today.

Dean said differences had been "allayed but not solved." The U. S. envoy said he would meet again later this week with ROK President Syngman Rhee.

During a 2 1/2 hour meeting today, the Communists hurled abuse at Dean and accused former President Harry S. Truman of once saying, "There is no democracy in the United States."

Dean called Truman "a fine, patriotic American."

He said North Korean delegate Ki Sok Bok did not even pick up the Allied proposal from the table after the meeting yesterday.

"Is this an example of your thoughtful, patient and courteous negotiation?" Dean asked.

He said if the Reds' reaction continued the same, "what is the sense of continuing these talks? Why waste our time?"

Truman Calls It 'A Good Speech'

KANSAS CITY (U. S. — Harry S. Truman today described as a "good speech" the talk by President Eisenhower on world control of atomic energy before the United Nations.

"I sincerely hope that President Eisenhower's speech will be carried to a successful conclusion and bring peace into the world."

"It is a continuation of non-partisan foreign policy as inaugurated by the late President Roosevelt and continued by me."

The former President said he did not listen to the Eisenhower speech because at the time he was driving to his home in Independence, Mo.

Truman commented that several years ago a U. N. committee was organized on the use of atomic energy on a peace basis. He said a sincere effort was made to carry out what the President is advocating now. He pointed out this committee held about 250 meetings but was stymied by the inspection regulations contemplated.

It's Trying Hard

All day it has been trying hard to snow. There have been a few flakes of the fluffy stuff in the air several times, and the sky looks like snow, the wind and temperatures feel like it.

Nixon Arrives In Iran, Plane Has Escort

Airport Is Under Heavy Security As He Begins Call

TEHRAN, Iran (U. S. — Vice-President Richard G. Nixon arrived today in Tehran. His plane was under fighter escort and the airport itself was surrounded by the heaviest security guard since Premier Fazollah Zahedi took over control of this turbulent nation from Mohammed Mossadegh.

Hundreds of police and troops patrolled the desert surrounding the airport as Nixon arrived. It was his last formal call of a global trip as an emissary of President Eisenhower. Nixon plans to confer with Zahedi and Sha Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

The road from the airport to the Shah's Palace was lined by soldiers. They stood at attention at every 100 feet. As the car neared the city limits troops interspersed with bluecoated police watched for any sign of a demonstration. But only scattered applause greeted Nixon and his wife as their party neared the city itself.

Nearly 100 officials and diplomats including Premier Zahedi, greeted Nixon at the airport, which was decked out in traditional Persian splendor.

In a short speech, Nixon declared it was a source of deep satisfaction to the United States that Iran has been making "effective" use of such financial, technical and military assistance as we have been able to extend to it. It is encouraging to note that in Asia, as elsewhere in the world, the constructive forces which promote internal and external hatreds, and which rejoice in chaos and human misery, are on the retreat.

The Nixons arrived after a five-hour flight from Karachi over the barren flatlands and jagged mountains of northwest Pakistan and through the heart of Iran.

School Board Votes $13,000 For Bonds, Supplies Purchase

Authorizes Additional Industrial Arts, Athletics and Classrooms Equipment, Takes Step Toward Non-Resident Tuition Hike

The Sedalia Board of Education concentrated on financial matters at its regular monthly meeting Tuesday night at Smith-Cotton High School, most of them centering around the purchase of equipment and school bonds. The board authorized expenditures and appropriations totaling almost $13,000.

The bulk of this amount will go for the purchase of school bonds at a saving of $1,685.73. The purchase of $10,000 worth of bonds for $9,122.87 is being made through G. H. Walker and Co., St. Louis. The bonds are due Feb. 1, 1962. A similar purchase of $5,000 worth of bonds in August saved the schools $1,517.34.

The board authorized Superintendent Heber Hunt to buy maps and globes as found needed in a recent survey of the city's public schools and to make sure that every classroom, beginning with the third grade, has a map. The purchase price is not to exceed $1,000.

A preliminary report showed that there is a need for 37 single maps, one case of seven maps and nine globes. More maps will be needed to complete the plan to provide every classroom.

Hunt recommended the purchase of the maps and globes, he said, because this year the Sedalia schools received more than the anticipated textbook money from the state. The expected amount was based on last year's figure, $14,914.66. The schools actually received $20,471.03. By law, the money can be used for other items.

Attorneys already had spoken their final words in cases involving Virginia, South Carolina and Kansas. The court turned today to cases from the District of Columbia and Delaware.

The Eisenhower administration joined up yesterday with those urging the high court to outlaw segregation, but Virginia, South Carolina and Kansas contended the question of dual school systems was for the legislatures—not the courts—to decide.

Seventeen states and the District of Columbia require some form of racial segregation in public schools. Three other states permit it.

Asst. Atty. Gen. J. Lee Rankin, who spoke for the Eisenhower administration, told the nine justices yesterday they have the "power and duty" to rule that segregation violates the 14th Amendment.

J. Lindsay Almond Jr., Virginia's attorney general, countered that the court was being asked by opponents of segregation "to intrude into the Congress where it should go."

And T. Justin Moore, who also spoke for Virginia, told the court the segregation issue calls for judicial restraint "if any issue ever has."

"In my humble judgment, there isn't anything you could do that would be worse than an adverse decision," Moore added.

Thurgood Marshall, Negro attorney for the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), said the question is "whether or not the wishes of these states shall prevail or whether our Constitution shall prevail."

Rankin, under questioning, said the Justice Department adopts the views on segregation expressed in a brief filed by the Truman administration last year. This brief called the "separate but equal" doctrine laid down by the Supreme Court in 1896 "wrong," and asked the court to re-examine and overturn it. The Justice Department said Rankin was speaking for the present administration.

Rankin suggested lower courts might be given the task, if segregation were outlawed, of considering plans for school integration proposed by the local officials affected. These courts, he said, could determine how much time would be required for a change-over.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Paul E. Wilson, who spoke for Kansas, like attorneys for Virginia and South Carolina, argued that Congress, in proposing the 14th Amendment, didn't contemplate outlawing segregation. And Wilson said, the states in adopting it didn't understand that it would do so.

Telegrams Favor Ike, Letters Take Side Of Sen. McCarthy

WASHINGTON (U. S. — The White House reported today that "the point of view of the administration is slightly ahead" in telegrams received as a result of Sen. McCarthy's write-or-wire-the-president appeal, and the Wisconsin senator's view "is ahead" in letters.

Press Secretary James C. Hagerty, giving this sum-up, said there were about 25,000 telegrams and 25,000 letters in all. They resulted from McCarthy's appeal of last Thursday that citizens let President Eisenhower know if they agree with McCarthy that the United States should ban aid to countries trading with Red China.

Eisenhower's Bold Bid for Atomic Energy Pool Puts Issue to Soviets

By ELTON C. FAY
AP Military Affairs Reporter

WASHINGTON (U. S. — President Eisenhower says the U. S. stockpile of atomic weapons is increasing "daily." In 1946 one test of two bombs was believed to have consumed what was then the whole stockpile.

Just what did the President mean to imply by the necessarily guarded language he used yesterday about the stockpile in his United Nations speech?

Is the increase a weapon a day? A fraction of a weapon a day? Several weapons a day? That information, of course, is top secret. But here are some materials for thought:

1. The United States stockpile is believed to have passed the 1,000 mark some time ago, perhaps soon after the outbreak of the Korean War gave impetus to the production program. And atomic energy officials have said publicly that the rate of production, as well as the total produced, was due to increase.

2. When in 1946 the United States exploded two test bombs at Bikini Atoll they were understood to be the only two finished weapons in existence.

That was a year after the world's first nuclear fission explosion had occurred in the Alamogordo, N. M., reservation and two others had been used on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

The President spoke in "the language of atomic warfare" when he made his urgent plea for peace. Of a hydrogen weapon with the force of millions of tons of exploding TNT.

Of new atomic bombs 25 times mightier than the missiles "with which the atomic age dawned" only eight years ago—and thus unleashing energy equivalent to half-million tons of TNT.

Of the long string of atomic explosions produced by the United States, which once worried over the scarcity of nuclear material.

Eisenhower—probably with the counsel of an anxious Prime Minister Churchill—put those thoughts into the speech.

He used the yardstick of the great war in which he fought to measure the power the United States now holds. He said:

"Today, the United States' stockpile of atomic weapons, which, of course, increases daily, exceeds by many times the explosive equivalent of the total of all bombs and every gun that came from every plane and every gun in every theater of war through all the years of World War II."

He said 42 test explosions have occurred since the historic Alamogordo shot July 16, 1945. That meant a grand total of 45 explosions have been set off by this country. Of the total, there have been three: the original test in New Mexico, two dropped on Japan; two fired in "Operation Crossroads" at Bikini; 31 shots at the Las Vegas, N. M., proving ground for small and intermediate explosions; nine at Eniwetok in the Marshall Island group of the mid-Pacific.

This was the first time it was possible to deduce precisely the number of test explosions at the Eniwetok Proving Ground opened in 1948. It seemed significant that Eisenhower, in reading his prepared text, omitted the printed word "atomic" in reporting 42 tests.

One of the Eniwetok shots in the test series last fall was a hydrogen explosion. While a hydrogen explosion is in reality an atomic explosion, the fusion instead of fission of atoms, the popular use of the word has been applied only to fission bombs.

But Eisenhower shaded the encouraging word of a great advantage in numbers of nuclear weapons for the United States with some sobering advice, including:

"Even a vast superiority in numbers of weapons, and a consequent capability of devastating retaliation, is preventive, in itself, against the fearful material damage and toll of human lives that would be inflicted by surprise aggression."

"Even against the most powerful defense, an aggressor in possession of the effective minimum number of atomic bombs for a surprise attack could probably place a sufficient number of his bombs on the chosen targets to cause hideous damage."

Duck Continues Well After Arrow's Removal

ST. LOUIS (U. S. — The white pekin duck, who was pierced from stem to stern by a vandal's arrow, is getting along fine, thank you.

The duck, owned by Mrs. C. A. Dwyer of St. Louis County, carried the lead-tipped arrow with it for about 12 hours before it was removed by a member of the Animal Protective Assn., Monday.

Today the association reported the duck was waddling around in fine fettle.

Mrs. Dwyer expressed surprise, she said, "because I couldn't see how it could live."

THEIR CONFERENCE OVER — President Dwight D. Eisenhower bids a fond farewell to Britain's Prime Minister Sir Winston Churchill at the Bermuda airport prior to boarding a plane for New York City. The two leaders will meet at the United Nations General Assembly. "I thank you very much, sir," Ike told Churchill, host for the Bermuda Big Three Conference. "Take care of your health." Lawmakers Cheer Ike In Bold Peace Stroke

But Some Doubts Are Voiced That Congress Will Give Approval For Advance Agreement

WASHINGTON (U. S. — President Eisenhower's proposal for an international sharing of atomic energy, knowledge and materials for non-military uses was cheered by many lawmakers today as a bold stroke for peace.

But at the same time doubts were voiced that Congress would give its approval for any contributions to a United Nations atomic agency unless there was advance agreement on foolproof international inspection within participating nations.

Sen. Edwin C. Johnson (D-Colo.), a member of the Senate House Atomic Energy Committee, said in an interview he doubts the U. S. is in any position to exercise necessary controls over atomic energy information. He said the U. S. certainly couldn't be counted upon to prevent or control atomic warfare.

Sen. Knowland of California, Republican floor leader and also a member of the Senate House Atomic Energy Committee, said he fears the President's proposal would be workable only if "full safeguards" are established to make certain that we are not converting from weapons to power plants while the Soviet Union was busily engaged in stockpiling weapons.

Knowland added, however, he regards the President's speech as a far-reaching proposal. He said Russia's reaction "may finally demonstrate whether or not that government is bent on aggression when they have built up their atomic capabilities and stockpiles."

Similarly, Rep. A. J. Altmeyer (D-Ill.) said the Eisenhower proposal "provides Soviet Russia with an opportunity to demonstrate to the world at large the peaceful intentions she has professed so often."

Rep. Durham (D-NC) said he thinks it will be "a long time before Congress will take the responsibility" of authorizing U. S. participation in an international atomic agency.

"It will not be easy to convince Congress that it is not some form of a foreign giveaway program," said Durham, a member of the atomic energy committee.

Another member, Rep. Hishaw (R-Calif.), commented: "This is an act of great statesmanship and might serve to break the deadlock which seems to have settled over the world. I believe that the committee and Congress would listen to his plans and proposals with interest."

School Superintendents To Meet Here Friday

The city and county school superintendents of Pettis, Cooper and Saline Counties will meet at 2 p. m. Friday in the office of C. F. Scotten, Pettis County superintendent, for a round-table discussion of administration problems.

Also attending will be Ray Evans, state supervisor, and a representative from Central Missouri State College.

Calls SAFF One of the Best--

C. of C. Welcomes New Wing Commander at Sedalia Air Base

The Sedalia Chamber of Commerce's regular board meeting for a welcoming party Tuesday night at the Old Missouri Hotel. Home-stand for Col. Chester C. Cox Jr., and Mrs. Cox, who recently arrived at the Sedalia Air Force Base. Col. Cox is the commander of the newly created 340th Bomb Wing to be stationed at the base.

Also guests were Maj. and Mrs. A. M. Bobbitt and Maj. and Mrs. Patrick J. Pomphrey. Major Bobbitt is executive officer and Maj. Pomphrey is information service officer at SAFF. Col. Franklin K. Reyher, commander of the base, was unable to attend, being on detached service. He will not be back at the base until Dec. 28.

Several representatives of the local newspapers and radio station were also present.

The group enjoyed a chicken dinner after which those present were introduced by Claude Boul, president of the Chamber of Commerce, who announced the regular order of business of the board was being dispensed with and it was a welcoming party to a new neighbor who has arrived at the Sedalia Air Force Base. Col. Cox was then introduced and called upon for a few remarks. He told of the Strategic Air Command of which the SAFF is a vital part, and of the future of the base as called for in present plans. He explained the operation of a wing and told of the B-47 jet bombers, which will be used by the wing, as well as the KC-97 refueling planes which are part of the wing equipment. He said in his remarks that he knew of no finer base construction for a bomber wing than that of the present Sedalia Air Force Base, and when completed it would be one of the best equipped and arranged.

Col. Cox told of passing through Sedalia several years ago, traveling south on Highway 65. "I remember," he said, "remarkably what a nice town Sedalia is. At that time we talked about the rumors that Sedalia was (Please turn to Page 8, Column 1)

Atomic Stocks Growing

Ike Says U. S. Stockpile Grows 'Daily'; Believe Have 1,000 Bombs

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (U. S. — President Eisenhower's bold new proposal for an international atomic energy pool put squarely up to Russia today a fateful decision on cooperation with the West.

Andrei Vishinsky, chief Soviet delegate to the United Nations, said "it is necessary to study" the President's proposal. U. N. diplomats declared that a favorable Soviet response could greatly advance prospects for eventual control of the atom—while a rejection would further harden the East-West deadlock on this issue.

Eisenhower, fresh from the Bermuda conference, where he got the backing of Prime Minister Churchill and French Premier Laniel for his action, told the U. N. General Assembly late yesterday the United States was ready to join immediately in secret talks on setting up an international atomic energy agency to which qualified nations would contribute atomic materials for peaceful purposes.

But he said Russia would have to be one of the participating nations. He did not name other nations, but it was learned he considers Britain, which produces atomic materials, and Australia, South Africa, Canada and Belgium, which produce uranium, the raw source material, also should be included.

The revolutionary nature of the President's proposal—the thing that made many U. N. delegates think it just might prove acceptable to Russia—was that it would not require prior agreement on an acceptable system of international inspection of atomic plants in all countries because it avoids for the moment the whole question of elimination of atomic arms.

Instead, it calls for creation of a practical operating body under the banner of the U. N. which would engage in strictly peaceful use of atomic materials for the maximum benefit of the greatest possible number of nations. For example, the agency could establish a plant to furnish atomic power in some area without adequate power resources.

The apparent belief of American officials is that if the free nations and Russia could cooperate in such an undertaking, learning to work together in so complicated a delicate field, they might gain mutual confidence which would eventually lead to a workable system of international atomic energy control and abolition of atomic weapons. Seven years of negotiation on this issue in the United Nations have produced no results.

Eisenhower made his proposal after a somber warning that the alternative to effective international action on the atom will be the probable destruction of civilization in an atomic war. He said it was not enough for nations to erect defenses, which can never be adequate, against atomic attack and to amass terrible power of retaliation against the attacker.

"To pause there," he said in words of grimness warning, "would be to confirm the hopeless finality of a belief that two atomic colossi are doomed to eye each other indefinitely across a terrifying world."

To stop there would be to accept helplessly the probability of civilization destroyed, the annihilation of mankind handed down to us from generation to generation, and the condemnation of mankind to begin all over again the age-old struggle upward from savagery toward decency, justice, and right.

"Surely no sane member of the human race could discover victory in such 'desolation'."

The speech had been months in preparation. The President had long wanted to report to the American people on the dangers of the atomic age and supply some new information on the power of atomic and hydrogen bombs. This information he summed up in a single sentence:

"Atomic bombs today are more than 25 times as powerful as the weapons with which the atomic age dawned (July 16, 1945), while hydrogen weapons are in the range of millions of tons of TNT equivalent."

To this he added the comparison that the U. S. stockpile of atomic weapons, which is increasing daily, already "exceeds by many times the explosive equivalent" of all bombs and shells dropped or fired all over the world in World War II.

West Powers Ask Talks On Austria

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Big Three Western powers have formally asked Russia to discuss the future of Germany and Austria at a meeting in Berlin next month. On the record, they neither encouraged nor shut off the possibility of a later session to include China.

Notes to the Kremlin from Washington, London and Paris were made public last night. They suggested, as had been learned unofficially a day earlier, that the Big Four talks open Jan. 4. The suggested location: a building formerly used by the Allied Control Council in Berlin's American sector.

This government employed a 200-word note, moderately phrased, to reply to the 2,000-word message from Moscow proposing the early Berlin meeting of the Big Four foreign ministers. The Soviet also reiterated a desire for Big Five talks, including China, and again asserted Western European defense plans as increasing "threat of a new world war."

As for talks with China, the U.S. reply said major progress toward German unification and an Austrian peace treaty "will contribute to the solution of other major international problems."

Without giving any sign the West would agree to a meeting with China, the United States said the Berlin talks "will enable any participating government to state its views on this question."

As for the Western defense system which the United States is backing, Washington reiterated that this "voluntary association (is) exclusively defensive and a collective contribution to peace."

The language of the notes from this country, Great Britain and France was worked out at Big Three talks in Bermuda.

While the notes did not officially foreclose the possibility of a later Big Five session, it was reported from informed sources in Bermuda that the Western powers "had agreed to resist any effort by Russia to set up such a conference."

American sources in Bermuda also said the Big Three will not consent to prolonged Berlin talks if the Russians offer only propaganda without concrete proposals.

Bob Thomas In Hollywood—

Luck Changed For May Wynn When She Changed Her Name

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Cinderella stories are getting scarce in the movie world, but here's one of a New York girl who changed her name when she changed her name.

Her real name is Donna Lee Hickey, which has a nice lilt to it. But you know how movie studios are. She was signed to play the feminine lead of May Wynn, the night club singer, in "The Caine Mutiny." Nothing would do but that she change her professional name to May Wynn.

Donna is now stuck with May, but she doesn't seem to mind. "You can call me anything you want, as long as you want me to sign on the dotted line," she told Columbia bosses.

As Donna Lee Hickey, she had only middling success in the show world. The daughter of a vaudeville, she matriculated at the New York Copacabana when she was 17. Talent scouts passed her up because she was too young for movies.

She became a veteran among Copacabana girls, maturing under the eyes of the talent seekers who viewed each opening night. They overlooked her for the newcomers. Finally she decided to try her fortune in Hollywood.

She toured the studios. No luck. She was about to head East when she discovered a letter she had mislaid. It was a note on introduction from 20th Century-Fox's New York talent scout to William Gordon of the studio's casting department. Gordon gave her a starlet's contract.

"My experience at Fox was not a happy one," she commented on the set of her second big picture, "The Wood Hawk." "I had bits in three pictures. And I mean bits. You have to look fast to even see me."

"I didn't even work during my last six months there. Every week I hired a taxi, drove to the studio, picked up my check and drove home. They said they would hire me for another year at the same salary. I said no thanks."

Donna took off for Las Vegas, Nev., where she was seen by Max Arnow, Columbia's talent head. He had wanted to sign her before, but hadn't been able to locate her. He invited her to test for "From Here to Eternity," but she lost out to another Donna named Reed.

Then came "The Caine Mutiny" and May Wynn. Our girl tried out for it and won. But her own name had to go.

"Stanley Kramer, the producer, said there hadn't been a May on the screen since the days of May McEvoy and Mae Murray," she remarked. "He also said May Wynn was good because it couldn't be mispronounced."

"He was right. I receive fan mail addressed to May, Mae or Mai and Wynn, Wyn or Winn. It always gets to me."

Fire Eater Gets Annual Supply Of Blowtorches

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Moosa Kutty Singelle, the fireproof man, is back in town to pick up his annual supply of blowtorches.

They must put out 2,100 degrees of heat because Singelle likes 'em hot.

After hearing somewhere that man cannot live by bread alone, he went into the fire-eating business, a specialty he's been practicing for 41 of his 57 years with Ringling Brothers, Barnum & Bailey Circus.

He heats up his blowtorch, then plays the flames on his tongue and in his eyes. If the audience demands more, he will heat up his arms, or let the flame bounce off his bare stomach.

He gave a demonstration yesterday at the firm where he buys his blowtorches.

"Sometimes I walk barefooted through red-hot coals," he said proudly.

"Sometimes, I really make the people cry." Claiming he's allergic to razor burn, he says he shaves most of the time with the blowtorch.

"It's simply mind over matter," he explained. "It's you. My whole family in Bombay, India, could go yogi."

He can eat almost anything because his taste buds and the blowtorches aren't compatible.

"I can't taste a thing," he confided to a reporter.

Asked if he smokes, he replied "No."

"I know you reporters," he said. "You're looking for a gag."

Kenneth Fallis To North Kansas City for Goodyear

Kenneth Fallis, better known to his Sedalia friends as "Ken," left Tuesday for North Kansas City where he has assumed the management of the Goodyear Store in that city, having been transferred from the Sedalia store last Nov. 15.

Fallis has been recuperating from an operation, which was necessary a few days before he was to take over his new position in Northtown, and has been in the Bothwell Hospital here in Sedalia.

He came to Sedalia about four years ago as manager of the Sedalia store, and while here was active in civic affairs, being at present vice-president of the Sedalia Jaycees and an active member of the Lions Club.

The new store is the second largest in the Kansas City district, which comprises the western part of Missouri, part of the eastern part of Kansas and the northeast tip of Oklahoma.

Robert H. Ward, who has been budget manager of the Goodyear Store at 15th and Main, Kansas City, has succeeded Fallis as manager of the local store. Ward

Sparrow Had Rough Ordeal In Court

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M. (AP)—A sparrow flew through the window into federal court yesterday. Several spectators and the bailiff chased it for an hour and a half. The bird evaded Marshal George Beach's pounce after tiring and falling to the floor. In a last, tired try, it fluttered out an open window a few minutes before Judge Carl Hatch entered.

Mr. Ward, who is married, is moving his family to Sedalia. They have two children, Linda Kay, 4, and Ann Marie, 18 months. The family will reside at 114 West 14th.

Police Tag Stolen Car For Parking Overtime

PROVIDENCE, R. I. (AP)—During the two days a shiny new Cadillac was parked on Hunnewell avenue, two overtime parking tags were tucked under the windshield wiper.

Then an alert mailman did some checking and notified the owner, Charles Drayton Jr.

Drayton called police to tell them he had found his car, which he had reported stolen Sunday night. Police were understandably silent about the whole affair.

NEW 1954 MERCURY

With New 161-Horsepower Overhead Valve V-8 Engine

NEW STYLING, NEW INTERIORS! Mercury is completely new in design, front and rear—looks wider, longer, lower than ever. Stunning new colors, many new fabrics never before available.

Entirely new performance that makes any driving easy!

DRIVING ease is something everybody wants—but you don't know what easy driving is until you drive this new 1954 Mercury!

The new 161-horsepower V-8 engine is only part of the story. New engine design gives you the easiest, smoothest, safest response you've ever experienced in an automobile—and with greater economy, too. You use only a small part of that energy for normal driving—so you've a tremendous reserve available on hills, highways, in traffic, anywhere.

Ball-Joint Front Suspension is found only in Mercury in its price class. A few minutes behind the wheel of this wonderful 1954 Mercury can tell you far more than words how much easier and safer it makes cornering, turning, and parking.

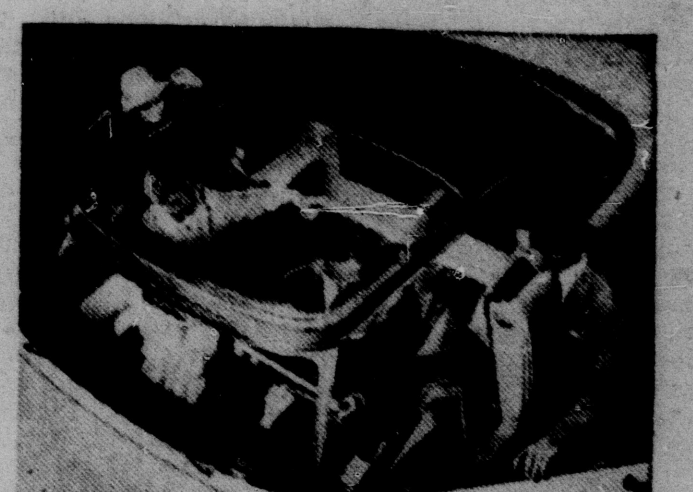

For the easiest driving you can buy—drive a Mercury!

All-new V-161 for easier handling! Here's the finest engine ever used in a popular-priced car. And it has a new 4-barrel vacuum-operated carburetor and overhead valves. Its 161 horsepower gives Mercury more power per cubic-inch displacement than any car in its class for easier, safer acceleration... and even greater economy.

Now ball-joint suspension for easier, safer control. This is a Mercury first—exclusive in its class—and gives an effortless new kind of handling ease—better cornering and road stability—easier parking.

First transparent-top production car—The Mercury Sedan Valley opens up new horizons in automotive design—a dream car of tomorrow come true today. Now you can enjoy overhead visibility with the comfort, the wind and weather protection of a coupe. The permanently fixed plexiglas roof is specially tinted to keep out glare. Exclusive interiors add to its distinction. The cost? Much less than you would expect. Here's the car that will cause more excitement than any other on the road in 1954!

Missouri High Employment Peak During October

JEFFERSON CITY—More Missourians were employed in non-farm jobs during October than in any other post-war October, Director Gordon P. Weir of the Division of Employment Security reported today. He said 1,293,700 workers were so employed, 8,600 greater than in September.

Principal employment gain was in the non-manufacturing group with retail trade and government lines showing increases of 5,300 and 7,000 respectively. Transportation and public utilities groups increased employment 800 for the month.

On the debit side, total manufacturing showed a net loss of 5,800 workers with the durable goods group accounting for 2,600 and the non-durable for 3,200. Principal losses occurred in transportation equipment with 1,600 and leather products, including footwear, with 2,200.

October employment followed the familiar pattern of the past few years, though in lesser degree. There were 4,200 more workers employed during the month this year than in 1952. The increase from 1951 to 1952 totaled 62,600, from 1950 to 1951 it was 28,200 and from 1949 to 1950, it was 89,500. An indication of the development of Missouri job opportunities may be found in comparing the total non-agricultural employment during October 1949 at 1,109,200 with the current year's total of 1,293,700, an increase of 184,500 jobs.

MU TEACHING HOSPITAL AND MEDICAL CENTER—Bids were opened Wednesday morning at the University of Missouri on construction of the eight-story teaching hospital building for the new four-year medical and surgical school. The bid opening was held in the large ballroom of the Memorial Student Union.

The accompanying photograph shows an architect's drawing of the entire proposed medical center, including a four-story medical science building, and a five-story nurses' home. The Missouri General Assembly has appropriated a total of $13,500,000 for the entire project, and university architects had estimated the probable cost of this teaching hospital section at approximately $9,000,000.

That part for which bids were read today includes the tall main building in the center of the photograph and the one-story section adjoining it on the right, or east, side. The building will face south on Stadium Road. The proposed medical science building shown in the photograph immediately behind, or north of the teaching hospital, and connected to it by a corridor which will house an auditorium capable of seating about 400 persons. The nurses' home is shown in the right foreground.

The out-patient department will occupy the one-story section on the right of the building, with the entrance at the southeast corner adjacent to circle shown in the photograph. The ambulance or emergency entrance is slightly to the left on the south, or front, of the building. The kitchen, employee cafeteria, and telephone exchange will be housed in the ground floor of the building. The area to be occupied by the medical center building has already been graded and footings for the hospital have been placed.

Prisoners Are Nabbed For Drunkenness, Same Reason for Jail Terms

TULSA, Okla. — Two men serving jail sentences for drunkenness were arrested yesterday for drunkenness.

Jailer Bob Forch said he found the men staggering around in the "drunk tank" and promptly had them booked on charges of drunkenness. Forch said their liquor was slipped to them by another prisoner outside the tank.

Finds Radar Warning Signs Mean Little

TOLEDO, Ohio — Last summer State Rep. Richard W. Taylor of Toledo argued in vain against a law requiring police to post warning signs at their radar speed traps. He said the law would kill the value of the radar device in catching speeders, who would slow down just to fool the cops. Recently Rep. Taylor paid a fine of $9.70 in Ottawa Hills police court on a charge of driving 32 miles an hour through a 35-mile zone of that suburb. Police took Taylor back and showed him the

Jess Barker Faces Contempt Citation For Ignoring Order

LOS ANGELES — Actor Jess Barker has been ordered to appear in court Friday to show cause why he should not be cited for contempt for moving into the Sherman Oaks home of his estranged wife, actress Susan Hayward, who is in Mexico on movie location.

Miss Hayward obtained a restraining order Sept. 8 that prevented Barker from entering her home. Her mother signed an affidavit yesterday that Barker moved in Monday, kept his 8-year-old twin sons up beyond their bedtime and insisted that the housekeeper cook for him.

Miss Hayward has sued for divorce, alleging cruelty. Barker, denying her charge, is asking for half the community property, which he values at more than $500,000.

Barker told a reporter he went to the house upon learning that one required radar warning signs had been posted.

Lt. Voorhees' Conviction Up To High Court

WASHINGTON — The court martial conviction of Lt. Col. Melvin B. Voorhees for violating Army censorship rules in connection with a book on Korea came before the nation's highest military court today.

The three-man U.S. Court of Military Appeals summoned attorneys for Voorhees and for the government for an hour's argument for each side. There was no indication when a decision might be reached.

Voorhees, former editor of the Tacoma (Wash.) Times, ran afoul of his superiors with publication of his book, "Korean Tales," based on his experiences as chief censor of the 8th Army in Korea.

He was convicted at Ft. Meade, Md., last February on five counts, and was sentenced to dismissal from the service and forfeiture of pay and allowances. He was found guilty of:

1. Willfully disobeying an order to withdraw the book manuscript from the publisher.

2. Violating Army censorship regulations in connection with the same manuscript.

3. Violating Army review regulations in connection with an excerpt from the book submitted to Argosy magazine.

4. Similarly violating regulations involving articles prepared for the New York Journal-American, but not published by it.

5. Bypassing Army channels in submitting the newspaper article directly to the Defense Department for security review.

South Abell 4-H's Select 3 Projects

The South Abell 4-H Club's regular meeting was held at the Community Hall Dec. 3 with ten members and four visitors present.

The meeting was opened by repeating the club pledge. A discussion of supplementary activities was held. First aid, grooming and everyday courtesies were chosen as projects for the coming year. The enrollment cards were given out and must be filled out and returned by Jan. 1. A card of thanks was sent to the Sedalia Chamber for the supper on recognition night.

After the meeting was adjourned refreshments were served. An elephant usually begins showing signs of age at 50 years.

Kiwanis Yule Party Monday, Wives as Guests

Kiwanians will entertain their wives at the annual Kiwanis Christmas party which will be held Monday evening, Dec. 14, at the Hotel Bothwell. William Ward, president, has announced that reservations should be made early, as a record attendance is expected because of the nature of the entertainment.

Herbert A. Seifert, chairman for December, has secured as speaker for the evening Mrs. Lloyd White, whose subject will be "The Philosophy of Hats." Mrs. White is known as "the hat woman" to Sedalians who have heard her speak before other groups and have enjoyed the wit and clever satire she employs in her talks.

Special music is also planned for the evening by the music chairman, Russell Maag.

Prankster Befuddles Everyone With 'Prize' Beer Case Delivery

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio — A man called the Pony Keg and said he just heard over radio station WPKB he had won a case of beer. The store duly delivered the case. Then the clerk scratched his head and called the manager. No, the manager said, the store hadn't offered the beer. The station said it hadn't announced any award.

The delivery man was sent back to the "winner's" home, where the "lucky" man insisted he did not make the phone call.

The case was returned—full.

British Greet Ike's Speech With Hopes

LONDON (AP)—President Eisenhower's plan to pool atomic energy for peaceful use over the world was greeted with eager hope by a wide cross-section of the British press today.

"It sometimes had seemed to us," said the Conservative Daily Mail, "that America has been a little reluctant to make those large gestures we believe to be necessary if Russian mistrust of the West is ever to be overcome."

"No man could have gone farther than Mr. Eisenhower," the Independent Times declared. "The deep sincerity in his speech must have a lasting impression far beyond the ranks of the General Assembly of the United Nations to which it was addressed. What marked Eisenhower's speech off from previous attempts to break the deadlock was that it suggested the first practical step which could be taken without an agreement on a full-scale plan of disarmament."

The Liberal News Chronicle said the Eisenhower plan "would replace a complete deadlock with a form of action."

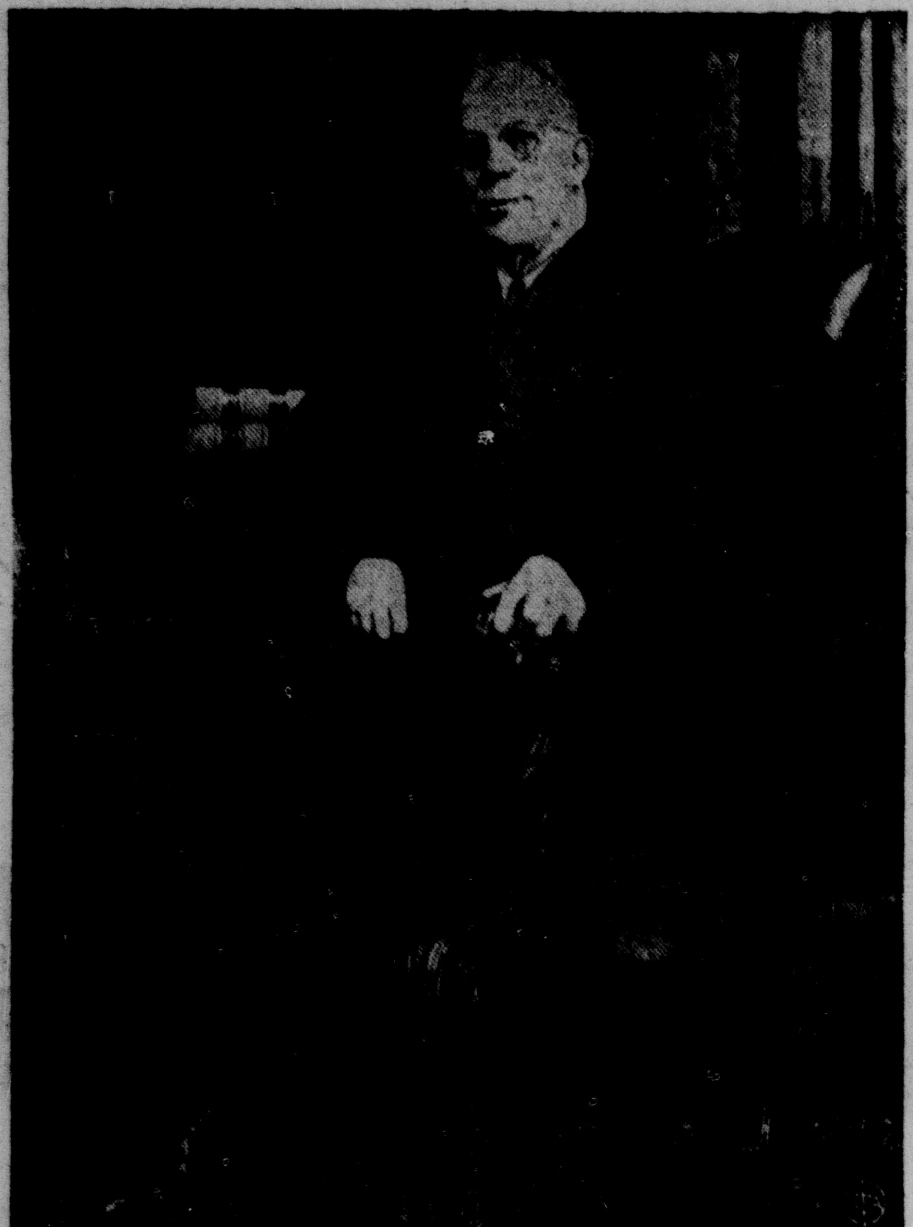

The Daily Herald, Laborite: "It is possible this American gesture may at last see the lifting of the burden of fear that weighs so heavily on men's hearts."

Loses Diplomat Job After His Government Tires of His Loves

CIUDAD TRUJILLO, Dominican Republic (AP)—Porfirio Rubirosa, playboy diplomat and onetime husband of Doris Duke, has been booted out of his job as minister-counselor of the Dominican Embassy in Paris. The government finally got fed up with the international headlines accompanying his romancing.

The Foreign Ministry announced last night that in view of Rubirosa's "personal conduct both in Europe and the United States, it is necessary to cancel his appointment. . . and at the same time divest him of his diplomatic status and prerogatives."

Rubirosa was named as the other man in a divorce suit brought

Thieves Leave Costly Trail for Police In $4,000 Burglary

DENVER (AP)—Butter-fingered thieves left an expensive trail for police in a $4,000 burglary.

Clothing, guns and jewelry, including 120 watches, were reported stolen. Harold Kal, operator of a war surplus store, yesterday pointed out to police a three-block trail of footprints in Denver's new snow, along which was distributed a good share of the loot.

At the end of the trail was a stalled car, registered to Richard Duran, 21. Police said more loot was in the car. Duran and his three brothers, Daniel, 19, Ambrose, 25, and Anthony, 33, were arrested and held for investigation.

Why Not Give the Best?

Gen. Marshall Gets Nobel Peace Award

WASHINGTON (AP)—The peaceful years and high honors have come for George C. Marshall, American soldier and statesman.

Tomorrow, in Oslo, Norway, he will receive the Nobel Peace Prize for the U. S. foreign aid program which bore his name.

Marshall was Secretary of State when he performed the service that won the award. It was one of three jobs to which he was recalled after he thought he had retired from public life as a five-star general with more than 30 years army service.

He came back first to undertake a special mission to Chiang Kai-shek for President Truman. Later he served as the nation's third Secretary of Defense.

Many of those who worked for him in the Pentagon and State Department call him kindly and considerate, but always reserved. Three decades as an army officer shape habit and traits. The older, easier-going Marshall walks and looks like a general, even in a tweed jacket.

The military have a practice of using the last name, without rank, when speaking to individuals of equal or lesser rank. There probably are no more than a dozen persons Marshall has ever called by their first names.

When he was Army chief of staff and Dwight D. Eisenhower was supreme commander of Allied forces in Europe, Marshall addressed him as "Eisenhower." Now he calls him "Mr. President."

When Marshall called a man in and started out just calling him "Jones," Jones knew things were running at an even keel. But if he opened up with "Mr. Jones" or "Col. Jones" the general was annoyed and trouble was brewing.

Now life is easier. The general spends hours in contemplative reading of newspapers and magazines about other peoples' problems. There are quiet evenings spent in his library and afternoons on a sunny porch. The general likes western novels.

He enjoys pottering about the vegetable garden in back of his home on the outskirts of Leesburg, Va. He occasionally shows up at the local grocery store for a bit of shopping.

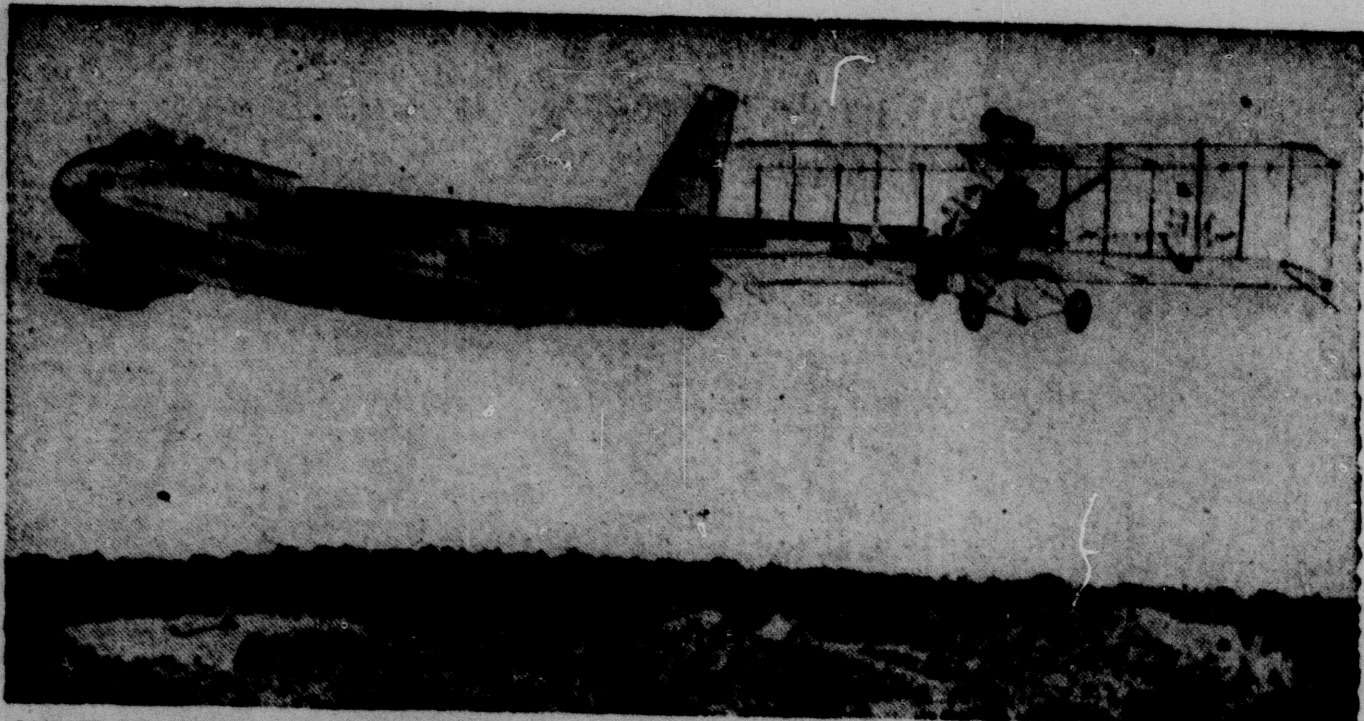

Marshall retires along about mid-evening and rises early in the morning. He never was an enthusiastic follower of the cocktail circuit. He hasn't smoked since 1935.

The general likes football, a sports interest that dates back to his student days at the Virginia Military Institute at Lexington, Va.

He has long been a booster of West Point's gridiron teams and considers himself something of an elder statesman-coach for "the Point" at the yearly Army-Navy classic in Philadelphia.

He likes golf but no longer plays it. He has a putter's touch for croquet, which he plays occasionally. He fishes some and goes canoeing when on vacation in the Adirondacks of New York.

When at his Leesburg home, Marshall visits nearby Washington

AVIATION PROGRESS ON DISPLAY—Exactly 41 years of aviation progress flies by as a jet-powered B-47 zips past a 1912 pusher-type plane over Washington, D. C. The small plane, piloted by its owner, Billy Parker, can stay in the air for an hour and a half, has a ceiling between 8000-9000 feet, with a top speed of 65 miles per hour. The B-47, in contrast, has a range of more than 3000 miles and can operate at altitudes above 40,000 feet.

two or three times a month on business trips. He is chairman of the American Battle Monuments Commission, which has jurisdiction over cemeteries overseas where U. S. military dead rest.

When winter descends on Virginia, the general and Mrs. Marshall, a modest, clapboard bungalow set in a smallish garden, so well screened by trees it barely is visible from the road only 25 yards away. There is a covered veranda. A living room with big

Choral Club Sings Today For Lions Club

The Sedalia Lions Club, at its noonday meeting Wednesday, was entertained by the members of the Sedalia Men's Choral Club, which presented the program for Edgar Brown, program chairman for December.

The club, under the direction of Abraham "Abe" Rosenthal, sang several numbers, accompanied by Miss Lillian Fox. It was the first appearance of the singing organization before the Lions in several years.

It was announced the Lions Club float, under the direction of Neil Chapman, was the civic club winner in the annual Christmas parade held last week.

Guests at the meeting, other than the members of the Choral Club, were: Milton H. Strong, Akron, O., representative of the Ford and Machine Co., Inc., and Max Shipley, new Missouri representative of the firm, who are in charge of the gum machines sponsored by the Sedalia Lions Club. They were introduced by D. Kelly Scruton, president. Bob Hougher of Goodyear was a guest of Harry Goldberg.

An announcement on the Community Christmas Party for the children of Sedalia and area was made by E. B. Smith. He said cooperating organizations now include the Rotary Club, Kiwanis Club, Optimist Club, Retail Grocers Association, Jaycees and the Lions. Other organizations indicate they, too, will participate.

The Children's party, originally started by the Lions, has grown too big for one such organization and other groups were invited to participate. And it is now known as a Community Christmas party.

Burl Sammons, general chairman, announced the motion picture program has been arranged with J. T. Ghosen, owner of the Uptown Theatre, and Joe Ruddick, manager of the Fox Theatres in Sedalia. The movie will be held Christmas Eve morning, starting about 10 o'clock and lasting until noon.

The Kiwanis Club will meet jointly with the Lions on Wednesday, Dec. 23, and join in on the "assembly line" sacking of candies and fruits to be given to all children attending the party at the two theatres in Sedalia. Should the crowd become too large for the Fox or Uptown theatres, the Liberty is being held open as a "standby" to see that every child gets to take part. No one will be turned away.

McCloskey Speaks To Cerebral Palsy Assn. on State Group

John C. McCloskey, attorney, member of the state board of the Society for Cerebral Palsy, as guest speaker for the regular meeting of the West Central Missouri Cerebral Palsy Association, told of the work of the society, what it stands for, its aims and how it ties in with the Cerebral Palsy Association.

The theme of Mr. McCloskey's address, as related to cerebral palsy, was that the Society for Cerebral Palsy hoped to work hand in hand with the C. P. Association, for there is much to be done for both organizations, separately and together. His remarks were both informative and interesting.

A report was given by Mrs. Gregory Connor on the nursery school. Plans are being made for a regular meeting date with trained personnel.

Mrs. Gregory West gave a report on her school age children and stated progress is being made.

Chamber of Commerce (Continued from Page One)

In the making to be reactivated and I asked her, "Wouldn't it be nice to be stationed here?" Much to our pleasant surprise we are stationed at the Sedalia Air Force Base.

"I'm a little partial to the mid-west anyway," said, "as I was born in Grand Rapids, Minn., and Mrs. Cox comes from Minnesota, too, and here we are in the mid-west."

Following the talk of Col. Cox, the group adjourned and an informal visit was enjoyed by those who remained with Colonel and Mrs. Cox.

Col. Cox's service record began in 1940, when he enlisted at Superior, Wis., in the Army Air Corps, and was trained at Randolph Field, where he received his wings and commission. His services include duty in Labrador, England and North Africa. During World War II he flew 25 missions over France and Germany with the Eighth Air Force and took part in the Normandy invasion.

Although he flew his wartime missions in the B-17 bomber, Col. Cox was among the first to take transition to the B-29 Superfortress when it was first operated by the Air Force in 1942. Among his decorations are the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Air Medal, the British DFC, the French Croix De Guerre and the World War II Victory Medal.

In 1946 and '47 he was deputy chief of staff of operations with the Air Transport Command at the Pentagon, Washington, D. C. He was deputy commander of the 301st Bomber Wing at Barksdale in 1951 when he was sent to French Morocco, in North Africa. There he was commander of Sidi Slimane Air Force Base.

He comes to Sedalia on transfer from his last command in French Morocco.

Col. Cox attended the University of Minnesota and holds a B.A. degree in industrial relations. Mrs. Cox is the former Irene Smith, and her home was at Virginia, Minn. They have one son, Chester Charles II, 11 years old. They reside on the base.

OBITUARIES

Carnes' Double Service

Last rites for James S. Carnes and son, Timothy, 320 East Howard, killed in a double tragedy Monday morning at their home, were held at 1 p. m. Wednesday at Glover Chapel, Richmond, their former home, the Rev. Clark officiating.

The Gillespie Funeral staff took the bodies there that morning, leaving about 9 a. m., with two funeral coaches.

Burial was in the Glover Chapel Cemetery.

Andrew J. Brownlee Services

Funeral services for Andrew J. Brownlee, who died in St. Joseph's Hospital, Kansas City, Thursday, Dec. 2, were held at 2 p. m. Sunday at the Nelson Methodist Church, the Rev. Ira W. Griffith officiating.

Misses Martha Sue and Josephine Townsend sang "No Night There" and "Nearer My God To Thee." Ralph Murphy was at the piano.

Pallbearers were: Charles Downes, R. K. Smith, W. F. Darby, William Nelligan, Grant Warren and Bud Sayles. Burial was in Nelson Cemetery.

He was born Oct. 15, 1874 on a farm near Nelson, son of John and Victoria Brownlee. On April 30, 1911 he married Miss Maude Sulalie Marshall. His entire life, after reaching young manhood, was spent farming near Nelson until his retirement 13 years ago.

Surviving are his wife and seven children, a like number of grandchildren, and a sister. The sons are: John, of the home, Joseph Earl, Rapid City, S. D., Billy F., Kansas City; daughters, Mrs. Grace Pickering, Dearing, Kan., Mrs. Nettie Louise Fuser, Booneville, Mrs. Catherine Borchers, Kansas City, and Mrs. Mae Metzger, Cambridge, Neb. The sister is Mrs. Grace Harlan Higginbotham, Kansas City.

Predicts Soviet Will Want Freeze Of Europe Lines

BONN, Germany (U-P)—West German government officials predicted today the Russians will call for a freeze on present East-West boundaries in Europe at the proposed Big Four foreign ministers' conference in Berlin in a supreme bid to kill off plans for European unity.

Competent officials said Western acceptance of such a Russian demand would leave Germany disarmed and divided, the Red army standing on the Elbe River and Western Europe with little hope of either political or military unity.

The Russians might even link their proposals with a suggestion for a non-aggression pact with the West, these officials said.

German authorities are convinced the Berlin meeting, if held, will make no progress toward settling the German question. They feel Moscow will refuse to give up control of East Germany and permit unification of this divided nation.

The Soviet objective at the four-power conference, they believe, will be to divide the Western Big Three and scuttle the projected European army and European political union.

The fear here is that a Soviet bid to leave things as they are in Europe might win strong support in France and possibly in Britain and Italy. France, especially, is fearful of rearming the Germans.

Men's Choral Club Sings for Men's Class Of Christian Church

The Sedalia Men's Choral Club, under the direction of Abe Rosenthal, gave the program Tuesday evening for a dinner meeting of the Men's Bible Class of the First Christian Church, held at the church.

The event was the climax of an attendance contest which has seen membership in the class begin to ten times its size at the beginning of the competition. Wives of the members were guests.

A. B. Warren, president of the class, was toastmaster of the evening and he introduced several members who spoke briefly and reviewed the growth of the class and told of its activities.

With Miss Lillian Fox as accompanist, the choral club sang some 20 selections, presenting for the most part a repertoire of sacred numbers.

Tom Ireland Rides Bicycle On His Birthday

Tom Ireland has had another birthday and took another ride on his bicycle. This makes 88 birthdays for Tom, but he hasn't every birthday. That ride is always on schedule to Georgetown or somewhere, but sometimes the weather doesn't cooperate, like the last two years when it was just too windy to take a ride.

But Tuesday, Dec. 8, Tom's birthday, was ideal, so he took a ride to Flat Creek and back on his bicycle.

The ride to the covered bridge Tuesday was inspired by the finding of his old skates, and memories came tumbling along. It was back in 1933, some 70 years ago, that Tom, then a school boy, and a bunch of other boys had gone to Weigand pond to skate. That was their favorite skating place. But when they arrived they found men cutting ice so that meant no skating.

The boys were going to skate some place so they walked to Flat Creek over the narrow gauge railroad and skated. Then they walked back home.

Tom's skates that day were brought home by a hardware store on West Main Street, where Meyers' Market is now located. He did a heap of skating after that, both on Weigand's pond and on Flat Creek, but he hasn't skated for a long time.

The weather has changed; there isn't much chance of ice skating around here any more, maybe two or three times a year and maybe not that.

Times have changed and so has the weather, thinks Tom, but he is having just as much fun. Let the birthdays come, he says, since he can still ride his bicycle.

Tom Ireland is a former employee of the Sedalia Democrat and is now retired.

Maryville Gets Most of Snow In Missouri

KANSAS CITY (U-P)—Maryville received more than five inches of snow this morning, but for most of the rest of the state there won't be much.

The storm hit Maryville with sleet about 3:30 a. m. By 7 a. m. the fall was measured at five inches, with a light fall continuing at mid-morning.

St. Joseph, to the south, had half an inch, while Clearmont to the north had only an inch and a half. The fall slowed traffic on highways and resulted in several accidents on U. S. Highway 71. State highway crews were out with snowplows and sander trucks. Some of the heavily traveled roads were turning to ice.

The State Highway Department at Jefferson City said roads in the St. Joseph division were covered with ice and snow, making driving hazardous. An inch of snow was reported in Mercer County but roads were normal in the rest of the St. Joseph division.

Kirksville had a light fine rain but no snow this morning. It was snowing north of there, at Lancaster, however.

In the wake of the storm's passage will come lower temperatures.

Some of the low readings this morning were: St. Joseph 27, Springfield 30, Joplin 34, Columbia, Rolla and Kirksville 35. At Springfield the low for tomorrow morning is expected to be about 23 or 24.

Most of the state had overcast skies this morning, but they were expected to clear by nightfall.

Dr. Medearis Resigns State Baptist Post

JEFFERSON CITY—Dr. T. W. Medearis has resigned as general superintendent of the Missouri Baptist General Association after a period of 11 years service. His resignation, tendered Tuesday night, was accepted by the state board of the denomination in a special session here today. It will become effective March 31, 1954.

Dr. T. W. Croxton, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Sedalia, moderator of the state association, presided at the meeting. The Rev. Walter P. Arnold, pastor of the East Sedalia Baptist Church, was present as a member of the board.

At the recent state convention held in Sedalia, the record of Dr. Medearis' 11 years' work was given to the several hundred Baptists from over the state.

Appointment Exams To Service Academies

WASHINGTON (U-P)—Sen. Symington (D-Mo) and Rep. Hillison (R-Mo) have announced the Civil Service Commission will conduct competitive examinations for appointments they will make to the United States service academies.

Symington said examinations for an appointment he will make to the Naval Academy will be held Jan. 11 in several Missouri cities. He said youths interested should write to him before Dec. 12.

Hillison said the Civil Service Commission will conduct examinations for both the Naval and Military academies in the Fourth Missouri district. He said the examinations probably will be given in Kansas City, Nevada and Warrensburg.

Square Dance Assn. Dance Friday Night

Just two more dances remain in the current series of the Sedalia Square Dance Association. One is this Friday night at 8 o'clock with Butch Nelson, El Paso, Tex., as caller and the next is on Saturday, Dec. 19, with Frankie Lane, Chanute, Kan., as caller. Both will be at Smith-Cotton cafeteria.

The beginners' class of square dancers will meet Friday night at Whittier School.

She was arrested on complaint of Mrs. Lucille Mos, 701 West Main, as a result of an accident at Henri's Tavern, Dec. 5.

Seven overtime parkers who failed to appear in court forfeited their cash bonds of $1 each.

Virgil Gatewood, 706 North Quincy, was released from the city jail Wednesday morning on an appeal bond from a jail sentence given him Monday on a charge of disturbing the peace and resisting arrest. Gatewood was sentenced to 60 days in the city jail. The case is being appealed to the Circuit Court.

Drivers Widen Strike On Pittsburgh Stores

PITTSBURGH (U-P)—AFL drivers have widened their pre-Christmas strike against Pittsburgh department stores.

About 150 members of teamsters local 249 employed by United Parcel Service walked off the job yesterday in a wage dispute, curtailing merchandise deliveries of Boggs & Buhl and Jonsson's, department stores, and several specialty shops.

Beaverbrook's Paper Advises Britain Quit UN

LONDON (U-P)—Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express advised Great Britain today to quit the United Nations. It said the U. N.'s "activities are damaging to the prospects of world peace and ruinous for the Empire."

The Express claims a circulation of more than four million. It follows an independent political line but is pro-Empire.

In an editorial, the paper stated: "What can Britain expect to get from membership of the United Nations except trouble and abuse. Britain and the Dominions have only six votes between them—and one of those goes to South Africa, which takes no part in United Nations affairs."

"But how many votes are there from South America? Twenty. And nearly all can be relied on for support by Britain's enemies."

The paper leveled its severest criticism at Mrs. Lakshmi N. Menon, Indian delegate to the U. N. trusteeship committee.

It said Mrs. Menon, urged by Prime Minister Nehru, was leading an attack to destroy the British Empire.

Letter Carriers Get Total of $1,833 Here For Muscular Dystrophy

The local Letter Carriers are pleased over the amount they have received to date for muscular dystrophy, a total of $1,833.16.

There will still be more, because every day people to whom they take mail, and for some reason or other missed giving contributions on the night of the nationwide drive are still giving.

This is one of the most heart-breaking diseases in the country today for which there is no cure. But there is hope—a hope that science, with funds provided by the people of the nation through the efforts of the letter carriers, will find the answer to the cause and cure for muscular dystrophy.

Rev. Walter Strickert Again Heads Pastors

Rev. Walter P. Strickert, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, was re-elected Tuesday to serve a third successive term as chairman of the Sedalia Circuit Conference of Missouri Synod Lutheran pastors.

The conference, which is made up of pastors in Pettis, Benton and Marion counties, meets each month. It is also known as the Lake of the Ozarks Conference.

Other officers elected by the conference for 1954 are: Rev. Henry Luker, Lincoln, vice-president; Rev. Henry J. Gerike, Cole Camp, secretary.

School Board

Instead of the previous monthly rate of $50, the gym will now be available for all-day use by the health classes of Broadway School, instead of only after school hours as was done previously. A full program has been drawn up and was exhibited to the board Tuesday night.

There was a discussion on raising the non-resident tuition for both elementary and high school students, and Hunt was requested to the board to contact the Warrensburg and Marshall public school systems for their attitude before the increase is authorized.

It is expected that both cities will have no objection, since their non-resident rates are so much higher than Sedalia's now that the proposed increase would have adverse effect on their enrollment.

If approved the increase would mean a hike in elementary tuition from $108 a year $180 and in high school tuition from $150 to $200 a year. There are 237 non-resident students now attending Sedalia public schools. Some 130 of them are at Smith-Cotton High School, 70 at Hubbard High School and the rest scattered among the elementary schools.

The Whittier Recreational Association was granted permission by the board to continue its use of the Whittier School gym twice a month for square dances under the $4 rate charged for organizations which do not charge admission.

The association has an admission charge of $1 a family per night but the receipts are turned back to the school in the form of playground equipment and its maintenance.

A representative of the association, J. W. Standard, attended the school board meeting Tuesday night and said that a total of $2,125 has been spent by the association in the last 2 1/2 years. Should the group be required to pay the $20 rate required of organizations charging admission to their dances, the association would earn no receipts and the purpose of its existence would be erased.

The increased rates for use of school facilities were established recently to provide for janitor service and wear of facilities. To illustrate the extensive use of these facilities, Hunt submitted to the board a report of that use during the single month of November.

The report showed that a use of the facilities of all city public schools of 111 nights. They were divided as follows: Broadway, four nights; Horace Mann, 20; Hubbard, four; Jefferson, 20; Mark Twain, 15; Washington, two; Whittier, 21; Smith-Cotton, main building, 11; Little Theater, 15 nights and one Saturday morning and the cafeteria eight nights. These do not include the afternoon use of the buildings by Scout organizations.

Harry Brougher, vice-president of the board, introduced a complaint that had been given of candy sales at the elementary schools by a salesman who visits the schools once a week. This was based mainly on the complaints of local dentists, who feel the high consumption of candy increases tooth decay. The board's consensus was that the children would buy candy somewhere as long as parents gave them the money. No action was taken.

Merry-Go-Round
Secretary of Treasury Gets
Rib From Defense Secretary

By Drew Pearson
WASHINGTON—Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey got a mischievous phone call the other day from Secretary of Defense Wilson, ribbing him about "background" press conferences.

Humphrey was still burning over a press session at which he remarked that the budget would have to be cut about $6,000,000,000, three-quarters of which would probably have to come out of the military budget.

Newsmen were told that the secretary could not be quoted directly and that he was talking for "background" only. So when Humphrey saw his quotes on the United Press ticker afterward, he hit the ceiling. The U. P. had attributed the statements to a "high treasury official," and therefore it was not a violation of the background agreement. However, Humphrey thought, his remarks had come out much stronger than intended, so he called in U. P. reporter Dick Moonney and bawled him out for half an hour.

Next day, the secretary of the treasury got a phone call from the secretary of defense.

"Welcome to the club," greeted the secretary of defense.

"What club?" asked the secretary of the treasury.

"The club that has been stung by background press conferences," chortled Secretary Wilson, "I imagine Foster will issue you your membership card."

Wilson referred to John Foster Dulles, who, as secretary of state, was the first to get into hot water through a background press conference.

Red Tape-Bound Drugs
Behind glowing public statements about U.S. aid to the stricken people of South Korea, there's a tragic, totally senseless story of governmental red tape. It's a story of bungling in Washington and death in South Korea.

Today an estimated 1,500,000 South Koreans, of whom more than 150,000 are orphans, are victims of tuberculosis. Yet two important drugs, in plentiful supply in this country—dihydrostreptomycin sulfate and ambisyrin—are withheld from South Korea except under severe restrictions.

American manufacturers and exporters are anxious to ship both these drugs, and Korean importers, with money in hand are becoming desperate waiting for the shipments to arrive.

But most shipments are being held up, largely because of a squabble between the state department and the commerce department. Both are so "communist conscious" that they're going far out of their way to insure that none of the drugs fall into North Korean Communist hands. And both are so "economy minded" that they've fired the technical experts capable of ascertaining whether the shipments would fall into Communist hands. Result: delay, confusion, and death.

Meanwhile, Japan, through agreement with the United States, is now shipping sulfa drugs and other pharmaceuticals into Communist China while West Germany is sending valuable drugs, including antibiotics, behind the other side of the Iron Curtain.

In short, countries under American influence are shipping these precious drugs into Russian-controlled areas, but shipments of the same drugs to our most severely hurt Allies are snafued in bureaucracy.

Children Die
While the Korean war raged, American drug companies had no trouble getting export licenses from the commerce department. But recently the state and commerce departments tightened their regulations and demanded that the American embassy must check on the Korean company and make sure it's doing business in South Korea, not trans-shipping to China.

To this end, Koreans were first told to go to the American embassy in Seoul and fill out forms to identify themselves. But when Korean importers trooped to the embassy to comply, they got word that they must operate through the commerce department in Washington—6,000 miles away. They were told to request the commerce department to check them as security risks.

Accordingly, Korean importers sent cables to the commerce department. But this system promptly broke down. The commerce department lacked sufficient personnel to handle the requests.

As an alternative, the commerce department asked U.S. exporters to cable the American embassy in Seoul to check on the security of their Korean customers. But after a few days this system was also abandoned. "We don't have the staff," explained the American embassy in Seoul.

Today the whole matter is stymied, with the state and commerce departments each urging the other to supply the "necessary" staff to handle the job of checking the security of import firms.

Said frustrated exporter Peter Michelson: "We can't ship the necessary drugs because a few ounces might fall into the hands of the Communists. But at the same time the rest of the free world is shipping the same drugs to the Communists—and even our own country is putting its O.K. on German and Japanese shipments to the Communists. This sounds like a Gilbert and Sullivan comedy—except that Korean kids are dying while we flounder."

Note—Communist China is currently getting so much dihydrostreptomycin to fight TB that it recently rejected a fresh British shipment of the drug.

Merry-Go-Round

Assistant Secretary of Defense Charles Thomas ordered a brand new desk the other day, because he didn't like the desk left by his predecessor. The old desk, however, was plenty good enough for his fellow assistant secretary, Fred Seaton of Nebraska, who accepted it rather than charge up another desk to the taxpayers. . . . President Eisenhower's bridge partners diplomatically try to lose most of the time, but have to put up enough competition so Ike will enjoy the game. One White House aide deliberately lost by such a lopsided score that he wasn't invited to play with the president again. . . . At the national convention of the young Democrats, the name of Harry S. Truman brought the greatest applause. Next in order of popularity were Estes Kefauver, then Adlai Stevenson.

Riches Of U. S. Also Carry
Responsibility For Wise Use

By Bruce Bissell
Depending on how you look at them, income statistics and the like can be pretty dry and routine, or they can tell exciting stories.

Take the recent batch turned out by the Twentieth Century Fund, a well-established economic and social research organization. It reported that the United States now has 40 per cent of the world's total income. No other nation is within miles of that percentage.

But we all know America is a country rich in resources and output. To confirm the fact statistically, you might say, is something short of thrilling. The real excitement, however, comes out when you dig a little deeper.

For, as the Fund shows, the striking thing about America's income is that it has grown so much—not only in absolute volume but relative to other nations. In 1938, we had just about 25 per cent of the world's income.

The advance from 25 per cent to 40 per cent of world income means many things. It is a tribute to American inventive genius, organizational know-how, productivity. It is one more demonstration of the blessings of varied and abundant resources. It also marks the fact that throughout a bitter six-year war our industrial facilities were spared the ravages of shellfire and bombs.

We were not only free to develop according to our talents and our capacities. It was vital to our survival and the whole free world's that we use these things with mighty fleet. This we did.

When it was all over, we loomed much larger than before. Perhaps we would have gained a bigger edge over other countries even without the war. But it seems fair to say that the great stimulus of war, plus its hurt to other nations, exaggerated our dominance.

It is because of that dominance that so many nations look to us for assistance.

Their dependence has, of course, dropped since the first years of the Marshall Plan. They have recovered, in the sense that they are producing at or above prewar levels. But their reserves of capital are low; the war devoured them, and they are well night irreplaceable. And without a cushion of capital they cannot expand and experiment as they must to hold their own in the contest for greater relative income.

Maybe it makes nice reading to note we have 40 per cent of the world's income. But we're not trying to murder the enemy in a football game. Such dominance is not something we can enjoy irresponsibly. As we have learned, it brings with it huge burdens.

If we would lessen those burdens, we should perhaps be concerned not so much with further widening our advantage but with helping other nations, through strategic aid and prudent investment, to redress the balance and stay closer in the income race.

Work Is The Best Cure For
Feeling Sorry For Oneself

By Ruth Millett
Here is a letter from a woman who realizes she has fallen into the habit of feeling sorry for herself, but doesn't know how to rid herself of the self-pity.

The very fact that she can see and admit the fault should help her to cure it. It may be so deep-rooted she will need professional help. But if it is just a bad habit she has fallen into recently, she should be able to get rid of it through her own efforts.

Most people have moments of feeling sorry for themselves: their best-laid plans go wrong; someone they have counted on lets them down; troubles pile one on top of another; illness strikes. Any one of those things can make a person feel sorry for himself if he takes the attitude: "Why did this have to happen to me?"

But he can shake off self-pity if he faces the fact that no one is immune to trouble or has a right to expect only good from life.

It will help, too, if the person will take stock of the situation that has brought on the feeling of self-pity and ask: What can I do about this? Where do I go from here?

Work Allays a Feeling of Self-Pity
You can't feel sorry for yourself when you are busy working out a solution to a problem or salvaging what is left after a personal failure.

The only way you can give self-pity the upper hand is to sit down and do nothing about your troubles.

So if this woman will face her problems squarely, figure out what can be done about the situation troubling her, she will discover she is too busy to waste time feeling sorry for herself.

Self-pity is sitting down and crying over spilled milk, instead of getting busy cleaning up the mess.

Gas To Color Oranges
Not Harmful To Humans

By Edwin P. Jordan, M.D.
It is naturally important that we should not be poisoned by the food we eat, and today's first letter bears on one aspect of that problem.

Q—I hear that most oranges on the market are treated with ethylene gas to turn the green ones the proper shade of orange to attract the housewife. Since many cooks use the skins in desserts for flavoring or for other purposes, is there any danger of lead poisoning—Mrs. T.

A—It is probable that Mrs. T. is confused between thylene gas and tetraethyl lead. It is the former—ethylene gas—which is used to bring about the color change in oranges and other fruits to which Mrs. T. refers, and this preparation does not contain lead and therefore there is no danger of lead poisoning from it. I understand the ethylene is usually introduced from a cylinder, but that it could not remain on the oranges long, and there is almost certainly no danger of poisoning from this source.

Q—We have heard that if a man is operated on for hernia, it will cause him to become sterile. Is this true?—Mrs. S.

A—It is not true unless some accident occurred at the time of the operation. This kind of accident is extremely rare.

Something a Bit More Appropriate in a Name

The World Today—
Ike's Proposal Is Historic

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower's proposal to the United Nations on the atom is historic. Whether it ever becomes a reality depends on cooperation by Russia and approval by Congress. Either could kill it.

It was a shift in American foreign policy. For years the United States and Russia have failed to agree on how to end bomb-making. But the atomic materials used for war can also be used for such peaceful purposes as medicine, farming and power generation.

Eisenhower suggested that, while the countries with atomic programs continue looking for a way to control atomic materials for war, they pool some of these materials and let them be used for peace.

That was the shift. Until now the United States has made agreements on disarmament preliminary to any cooperation with Russia in the peaceful use of atomic energy.

Eisenhower's speech, carefully prepared, was not a blueprint but a suggestion to the U.N., where it would have to be explored and developed. So it was vague, of necessity.

Just because it was, Russia will have a hard time saying "no" right away, without looking like an enemy of mankind. Later, of course, she could block it by haggling over details.

This is the background: This country has insisted that before it agrees to disarm, stops making bombs and destroys the bombs it has, Russia must agree to a system for checking in both countries to prevent cheating.

This would mean freedom for a U. N. team of inspectors to examine minutely both countries' atomic materials and plants. In that way neither could continue making bombs secretly while pretending not to.

Russia wants it the other way around: both countries must agree to disarm, end bomb-making, get rid of their bomb supplies. Only after that could inspectors poke around, maybe.

But, says the United States, this country would be a chump to go for that. The United States has the bigger supply of bombs. Suppose it gets rid of them but Russia breaks the agreement, secretly, by keeping bombs.

Then this country, without atomic arms and before any U.N. inspection could cross through the Iron Curtain, would be at Russia's mercy.

That was exactly the deadlocked position of the United States and Russia on ending the bomb race, with no prospect of progress, when Eisenhower yesterday laid down his plan.

He didn't yield on the inspection point. So far as is known, this country will still insist, in any future agreement on getting rid of weapons, that inspection must precede disarmament.

This is what he suggested: A special agency of the U.N. should consider his proposal. The countries with atomic materials, mainly the United States and Russia, can contribute some of them—not all—to this agency.

The agency will have to figure out a way to guard these contributed materials so no big power could grab them. Just what this means is not clear.

Once the agency had control of these materials, the world's scientists and engineers would be allowed to use them for the welfare of mankind.

The better the plan worked and the more atomic materials the big powers contributed to this peaceful stockpile, the less atomic material they'd have left for bomb-making.

If the Eisenhower proposal worked and the United States and Russia found they could cooperate in the peaceful development of atomic energy, the easier it might be for them to agree on getting rid of the atomic bomb.

Would the President's proposal be dumped into the U.N. General Assembly, that international debating society? Eisenhower said the big powers should talk it over privately.

But before this country starts giving atomic materials away, or gets committed to any international atomic plans, even a peaceful one, Congress must approve. That won't be tomorrow.

THE ANGELS FELL

XXVII
[WENT to answer the telephone in terror and hope. The colorless voice of an operator said: "Just a moment, Kingston's calling."

A deep bass said: "I'm Sergeant Hopkinson of the Kingston police. Your son is okay, Mr. Flagg."

I let my breath go. "Where is he?"

"Right here. He wasn't kidnapped. Mr. Flagg. One of our patrolmen found him in the park. The boy was under a tree, trying to keep out of the rain. The minute Patrolman Blake spotted him he knew it was the boy we were all looking for."

Hannah was kneeling beside me. I nodded to her, smiling, and she leaned back against the bed and closed her eyes.

"Okey, except you could wring out his clothes. We got him wrapped in a blanket."

"Can I speak to him?"

Joey started to weep as soon as he was on the wire. "Pop, they all said Dina killed Barney. I wasn't going to stay in that school."

It wasn't only what the boys had said. He had been shocked and frightened, and like any small boy he had fled toward home. He had only $2 and hadn't dared ask Kip Albert for train fare, so he had tried to hitch-hike.

"Pop, I'll never go back to that school."

I told Sergeant Hopkinson that I would leave at once and he advised that I bring dry clothes for Joey.

When I hung up, Hannah said: "Paul, let me go with you."

Kneeling beside me, her hand was on my knee. Her hood was off and her hair was on my cheek.

"If you want to," I said, and I dialed Martha's number. Martha choked up when I told her the news. Then she said: "That briefcase! As far as I'm concerned, it caused worse than murder. It made Joey run away from school and made us assume he was kidnapped and made us act so nasty in my cellar. Not that Hannah Rahn didn't have it coming to her anyway."

"Don't let that part bother you."

"It doesn't. Pick me up on the way. I'll drive to Kingston with you."

No excuse I could think up would sound right.

"Hannah Rahn is coming along too," I said.

There was a silence. Hannah had turned her back and appeared fascinated by the hole in the wall.

"Is she there with you now?" Martha asked after a moment.

"Yes," I felt that I had run out on her.

"Then you won't need me. I'll get some sleep."

STARS were pushing through the torn sky, but it was still blowing and the chill remained. In the car Hannah sat close to me, and after a while I felt her shiver.

"Cold?" I asked.

"Yes. I didn't go into the house when I got home, so I have hardly anything on under this raincoat."

I turned on the heat. In a few minutes the car was cozy warm, but she remained against me, and she put her head on my upper arm.

"How well did you know Dina?" I asked.

"We moved in the same social circle, but that was all. She's the kind of woman only men like and who likes only men."

"George Maudson said he heard gossip about her and another man."

She stirred, straightening up a little. "George heard that from me. I mentioned it one night while he and Father were discussing whether Barney Larkin should run for judge."

I said: "You've been trying to use me. Now give me the details."

"Our maid and the Larkins' maid were close friends. You know the way maids tell each other everything, and Amy—our maid—told me. It seems that whenever Barney Larkin was away overnight Dina didn't come home until dawn, and sometimes she said she was visiting a friend in the evening when the maid knew she wasn't. I doubt if Barney suspected. She was careful, but she couldn't keep it from the maid. About a month ago she fired the maid, perhaps because she realized that she knew too much. And the maid in a rage went and told Barney."

JOEY was asleep on a cot in the police station. He was so exhausted that I managed to dress him without waking him; but he came out of sleep abruptly when I carried him out to the car, and he clung to my neck. He didn't protest when I kissed him.

In the car he sat between Hannah and me. She slipped an arm about him, and he snuggled against her and within a few minutes he was again asleep.

After a while she dozed off too. Dawn broke clean and crisp and fresh-smelling. Every now and then I glanced at the boy asleep in the sleeping woman's arms. They made a snug picture, complete and throat-catching, but it was spoiled by an invisible briefcase.

Hannah woke at the outskirts of Raventon, blinked into the broad daylight, adjusted Joey's head on her breast. I asked her if she wanted to go on to my place for her car.

"I've had enough driving," she said. "I'll send for it this afternoon."

"You didn't get anything out of this ride," I told her.

"You think so?" She looked out of the window on her right until we reached her house.

Looking Backward

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

An old building on a car storage lot between Third and Fourth on Osage was destroyed by fire. In it was a Franklin car and various articles stored there. The property was owned by C. E. Ilgenitz.

1928
T. J. Walker, Columbia, editor of The School and Community, organ of the Missouri Teachers' Association, was speaker at a banquet at Hotel Bothwell. He stressed more attention to rural schools and additional funds to carry on educational work.

1928
C. C. Gentry, accompanied by his wife, narrowly escaped a plunge into Muddy Creek, west of Sedalia on highway 50, when their Buick sedan crashed through a side rail, coming near toppling over. It took a force of men and a wrecker to get it back to the center of the bridge.

1928
O. C. Cook, Oklahoma City, was visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Cook, south Ohio, while enroute to Orbnay, N. Y., on a business trip.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Charles Rothgeb and Dr. Ira G. Barton returned from Benton County, south of Warsaw, where they had been on a wild turkey hunt in which they bagged two, one of 18 pounds and the other 14.

1913
Judge B. G. Wilkerson, visiting his son, Fred Wilkerson, at Youngstown, O., was to also visit points in South Carolina before returning home.

1913
Joseph Stern accepted a position as telegrapher in the office of the master carbuilder at the MKT shops. He spent the summer at Cincinnati, O., and other eastern points.

1913
Robert Moore purchased the nine-room dwelling of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Meyer, 1320 West Fourth.

New Yorkers Get Papers Again Today

NEW YORK (AP)—The city's biggest newspapers resumed publication today, bringing news and ads to millions of readers after the worst strike in the history of New York journalism.

AFL photo-engravers and the publishers agreed yesterday, the 11th day of the strike, to a fact-finding board proposed by federal mediators.

The engravers will receive an immediate $3.75 weekly package increase.

Hours later, New York's three struck morning papers—the Times, Daily News and Daily Mirror—had today's edition on the streets. The Herald Tribune, the city's lone major daily which was not struck, carried its first ads in nine days in an 88-page paper.

Meanwhile, the three struck afternoon newspapers—the Journal-American, Post, and World-Telegram and The Sun—worked to put out their first post-strike editions today.

So did another metropolitan area paper, the Long Island Star-Journal, which closed down last week in a dispute related to the strike.

As the presses rolled again, both sides in the wage-contract dispute lost no time in putting the fact-finding machinery into operation. Each picked a fact-finder to meet here today and try to agree on a third. The federal mediation service will name him if there is no agreement.

Representing the union is AFL President George Meany. The publishers picked Richard Slocum, general manager of the Philadelphia Bulletin and vice president of the American Newspaper Publishers Assn.

Creation of a fact-finding board was a compromise between the publishers' proposal to submit the dispute to binding arbitration and the strikers' refusal to do so.

The engravers voted to return to work yesterday only after being assured they can strike again if the fact-finders' decision does not suit them. The decision may be ready next week. It is not binding on either side.

Under the agreement, the 400 photo-engravers involved will get a $3 weekly wage increase, plus 75 cents worth of other benefits—the same package which the publishers agreed on all along, even while proposing arbitration. The fact-finding board can recommend additional amounts. The union had sought originally a $15 package; but scaled this down to $7.50. Wages are now $120 a week for day work, $131 for night.

Strike leaders said the formula is expected to set a pattern for the other 20,000 union employees of the city's newspapers.

The publishers estimated that the $3.75 package, extended industrywide in New York, would cost them more than 34 million dollars a year. Any added grant by the fact-finders would figure out at a million dollars a year industrywide for every weekly dollar gained by the engravers.

Publishers were taking the industrywide view since eight other unions, including the CIO American Newspaper Guild and affiliates of the AFL Printing Trades Council, have contract negotiations or wage reopenings pending or due to come up soon. Editorial, business and some other employees are represented by the guild.

Members of these unions refused to cross the picket lines set up by the photo-engravers, forcing the papers to suspend. The engravers make the metal plates from which photos and other illustrations are printed.

Walter A. Magglio, general counsel of the federal mediation service, expressed hope last night that the accord would bring long-term stability to the newspaper industry here and that the seven AFL mechanical unions would agree to fact-finding machinery similar to that accepted by the photo-engravers.

Magglio, who came here from Washington to help other mediators and was instrumental in hammering out the agreement, said a part of the plan was to have the AFL craft unions agree to a uniform expiration date on their contracts. The guild is not directly involved in this plan.

It gets a terrific play from the youngsters, while parents are left free to do their Christmas shopping.

"During the negotiations with the photo-engravers, we found it necessary to have a formula to bring a measure of stability to the industry," Magglio said. "The recommendation made to the other unions, in our judgment, will establish a pattern of stability, not only for this year but for the future."

William Mapel, president of the Publishers Assn. of New York City and a key management negotiator, said his group was willing to adopt the full plan if the unions agreed. Morning papers resumed publication with abbreviated first editions.

No ads, except death notices, were carried by the Times in its 18-page edition.

First editions of today's News and Mirror, both tabloids, contained 24 pages. In later editions the Mirror added 24 pages. The News second edition had 32 pages, and the final had 68.

Summaries of the news during the strike period were carried by the News and the Mirror. Both also carried brief resumes of comic strips.

Big display ads filled the Herald Tribune, which had reduced its size to eight pages during the strike. The paper said it was a record amount of advertising lineage for the paper.

The photo-engravers membership agreed to end the strike yesterday by a vote of 198-77. Twice before they had voted against accepting arbitration, which the publishers offered along with the $3.75 package.

Barbara Will Be At Home For Christmas

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Four-year-old Barbara Jean Simon will be "home" Christmas instead of in an institution because the St. Louis Court of Appeals just couldn't bring itself to do otherwise in a child-custody suit.

Barbara, placed in 1952 with her paternal grandmother, Mrs. John Holland, by her mother, Mrs. Robert Vinson of Caseyville, Ill., was taken to New York by her father, Eugene Simon. His legal right to do so was questioned in the courts.

The law, the court first decided, would require Barbara to be kept in the St. Louis County Children's home until Mrs. Vinson's attorney prepared a criminal contempt citation against Simon.

When Barbara began to cry, the attorney told the court he and the mother would rather have Barbara at this season stay with the Hollands.

Frick Wants To Keep The Pension Plan

NEW YORK (AP)—"The pension plan will be abandoned only over by dead body," Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick said today.

He made this vow despite the stunning affront in Atlanta last Wednesday when player representatives Ralph Kiner and Allie Reynolds refused to meet with him because he wouldn't allow them to bring their lawyer along.

His statement set the stage for today's joint meeting of major league club owners. They planned to discuss the possibility of either ending the pension plan entirely or turning it over to the players. They will also vote on a number of other player demands.

Hardly anybody feels the owners will dissolve the multimillion-dollar pension plan even though they are bitter at what they term "defamation of our character." Some, however, like Presidents Walter O'Malley of the Brooklyn Dodgers and Tom Yawkey of the Boston Red Sox have expressed willingness to let the players run the plan themselves.

The owners will consider specifically a resolution passed at the Sept. 29 meeting of the major leagues Executive Council recommending that a committee be set up to study and report on procedure for ending the pension plan.

Pension plan problems were discussed yesterday by the owners in separate league meetings. No decisions were announced.

There were plenty of other developments yesterday. After several days of swapping nothing but hot air, the clubs finally completed a man-sized player trade. The Washington Senators dealt slugging outfielder Jackie Jensen to the Red Sox for southpaw Maurice McDermott and outfielder Tom Umphlett.

In a lesser transaction, the Philadelphia Athletics sold veteran second baseman in a Cass Michaels to the Chicago White Sox for a reported $15,000.

Manager Bucky Harris of Washington appeared well satisfied with the deal that gave him a 25-year-old pitcher who won 18 and lost 10 last season and a fleet-footed 22-year-old flycatcher who batted .263 in his rookie season.

Jensen, 26, whose long-bat, right-handed hitting strength should fit right in with the friendly left field wall in Fenway Park, batted only .266 last season but he drove in 84 runs and hit 10 homers in spacious Griffith Stadium.

Prospects for more player trades weren't too bright today since several of the managers had left or were on the verge of leaving town. Debate on the pension plan however, continued hot and heavy.

Frick insisted that Kiner and Reynolds had given their assent to the resolution which is aimed at terminating the pension plan and that the players' attorney, J. Norman Lewis, was in the room when it happened.

Reynolds joined Kiner yesterday in denying he ever heard any such resolution, let alone voted on it.

"I want to go on record that I have not voted to terminate the plan, as has been implied," he said. "We couldn't vote, anyway, because we have no vote in the executive Council meeting. It was my understanding that the main point in the resolution was to appoint a committee to get together and review the pension plan to see if it could be improved. As far as I know, nothing has been done."

Frick conceded that the players might not have understood the resolution, which was worded with enough legal phrases to baffle the layman.

Sports Roundup—

John Lattner Does Football A Service With One Statement

NEW YORK (AP)—John J. Lattner, a pretty fair halfback for Notre Dame, has done football a service not only with his playing ability but with a simple statement that the sport "isn't the most important thing in life."

The two-time All America demonstrated again that a football player can also be an intelligent citizen as he accepted the Heisman Trophy as the outstanding college player of the year in New York.

Sure, the good-looking, 21-year-old Chicagoan likes to run, block and tackle. But he doesn't think football is all life has to offer. And he is sincere in attributing his success in the game to his coaches and to his teammates.

"Without a GOOD team behind him there is no such thing as a so-called star," Lattner said in accepting the award at the annual banquet at the Downtown Athletic common sense. I wouldn't have been able to do what I did this year without those teammates and the coaches who made it possible."

Lattner, who never knew anything but two-way play even in the days of two platoons, paid special tribute to the inspirational guidance of his mother as praise was heaped upon him as the best performer in the year that football returned to limited substitutions.

The impressive affair was a testing one for the 190-pounder who had sparked his team when it most needed him during the season. But in appearance and in speaking it was the same durable John Lattner whom Coach Frank Leahy had called his "bread and butter" ball carrier.

The kid who came from Chicago's Fenwick High School to South Bend amid offers from many colleges thinks his immediate future will be with Uncle Sam, probably in the Air Force. He hopes to try pro football but he's majoring in accounting and intends to become a CPA in a few years.

Leahy, who couldn't attend the ceremony because of ill health, said in a telegram:

"He's more of an All America off the field than on."

Selection of the 24-man teams was completed yesterday.

The West squad included: Ends, Morris Kay, Kansas and Gary Knafele, Colorado; Tackle, Ted Connor, Nebraska; Guard, Roger Hantla, Kansas; Backs, Breddie Williams, Oklahoma A&M and Verry Switzer, Kansas State.

Only one other hound scored in all three departments. This was Lady Fairfax, owned by Carl Hunt, Kirkwood, Mo., given 50 for speed and driving, 15 for hunting, and 10 for trailing.

Another great runner, Herb McKenley of Jamaica, arrived in Melbourne Monday to cut himself in on the popular Australian sport, and he said he understood that Patton would have been interested if he had been invited.

But Patton, Olympic 200 meter champion in 1948, said in an interview yesterday he is definitely not going to Australia under the terms and conditions he has heard about recently.

Professional running attracts large crowds in Australia, and racers can win as much as $25,000 a crack by backing themselves with the bookies, Melbourne dispatches say.

The conference's TV committee supported a program of regional or sectional screenings last year without success. A similar proposal is thought to be under consideration this year.

CHICAGO (AP)—Dissatisfaction with the present television policy of the NCAA is expected to be reflected in opening sessions today of the Big Ten's annual winter meeting.

The Cardinals led at the half, 25-18, and at the three quarter mark, 34-30, before Ottawa warmed up to the winning task.

Patton Says 'No Soap' About Possible Entry In Australia Racing

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP)—Mel Patton says it would take a heap of money to lure him into Australian professional footracing.

Stover Plays Town-Country To a Knotter

Something new in basketball games around these parts occurred Tuesday night at Stover—but it gets a rematch for the two teams — because Stover had 60 points and Town and Country had 60 points. Stover had thought they won 61-60 when the whistle blew finishing the game, but later it developed the scorebooks of Stover and T-C tallied alike, 60-60.

It seems the scoreboard showed Stover 59, Town and Country 60, as Martin of Stover made a basket which gave them two points to win the game—according to the scoreboard. The Sedalians protested but they weren't mad, figuring they could be wrong, too, so the teams took their showers, dressed and were about ready to hit for home when the Stover scorekeeper discovered in figuring his book that it showed 60 points, too.

The teams already dressed, the fans gone home, the teams decided to call it a tie and play another game at a later date. "It's all in fun anyway," remarked a T-C player when they got back to Sedalia later in the evening.

T-C led the first quarter by one point 7-6; then Stover came back and took the second by one point, 14-13, to tie up the game in the first half, 20-20. In the second half the two teams knotted the third quarter, 18-18, hit 22-22 in the fourth. Totals, 60-60.

Vern Masters was high pointer for T-C with 10 goals and one free throw for a total of 21 points while Bill Hodges made 4-5 for 13 points.

Don Case carried the mail for Stover and held game scoring the loop making nine goals and 12 free throws for a total of 30 points. Martin backed him up with 5-3 for 13 points.

The box score:

Haas' Lesson Last Sunday Won Tourney

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Fred Haas Jr. said today a lesson he took in New Orleans last Sunday enabled him to win the La Gorce Pro-Member Tournament and pick up $500.

Haas, a professional who plays out of New Orleans, said a lesson by Sidney Danjean "cured a fade in my shots by switching me from defensive to offensive golf."

Haas had 34-35 yesterday over the par 71 La Gorce course, which measures 6,844 yards. He four-putted the par 5 11th hole from 30 feet to take a 7 but finished 1 stroke ahead of his nearest rival.

Tied at 70 were Art Wall, Pocono Manor, Pa.; John Barnum, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Denny Shute, Akron, Ohio; Walter Burkemo, Franklin, Mich.; Jimmy Demaret, Kiamasha Lake, N. Y., and Mike Krak, Wierton, W. Va., who got $183.33 each.

Sam Snead, White Springs, W. Va.; Doug Ford, Harrison, N. Y., and Eldon Briggs, Saginaw, Mich., posted par 71s and won $30 each.

The La Gorce is a tuneup for the $10,000 Miami Open, which starts tomorrow at the Miami Springs course.

Faloney's Doctors Remain Undecided

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)—Bernie Faloney's knee is responding to treatment but doctors say they won't know for another week or 10 days whether the star Maryland quarterback will play in the Orange Bowl.

Faloney, injured Nov. 21 in Maryland's victory over Alabama as the Terrapins were completing their undefeated season, will begin exercises to strengthen the injured knee and will continue heat treatments.

Browns' Had Better Spirit During 1953

CLEVELAND (AP)—Otto Graham said in training camp last summer "our spirit is better this year."

In the spirit department, the Cleveland Browns usually manage to do pretty well, even when they are taking their lumps. And last year the Browns had a rough season. For a team coached by Paul Brown, that is.

They not only lost the championship game in Detroit, but dropped four of their 12 league games. This year's improvement may be due in part, as one player recently hinted, to the fact Brown got rid of a "couple of grumblers."

With the possible exception of a few weeks last year, the Browns always have had it in the clutch. The 1950 team made a specialty of that. And five times that season, including a division playoff, Lou (The Toe) Groza supplied them with the necessary field goals to win.

In the championship game that year, Los Angeles was leading 28-27 with only a minute or two to go. Graham fired a couple perfect passes to get the ball down deep. And as the seconds melted away Groza squared his shoulders with the goal posts, grunted at the kneeling Tommy James, and kicked the football where it had to go.

When the kicking unit came on the field, what were the Browns, Dan Lavelle and his cohorts doing? As they dashed toward the sidelines, they were tossing their helmets into the air, celebrating in advance.

If that jubilant moment has the tang of a college campus about it, so does the weekday locker room scene at League Park, where the club practices. It is so much a place of fun, horseplay and spirit that a local baseball writer recently suggested the Cleveland Indians should visit the Browns.

Presumably there is a direct connection between the Browns' spirit and the one thing everyone will tell you about Paul Brown: "He has an intense desire to win."

Brown's family has lived with that idea for years, and even makes jokes about it.

You get the same story from people who play golf with Brown or gin rummy. Bedtime is bedtime, if Brown's gin rummy points are on the right side of the ledger. If not, bedtime is when they get there.

After one recent game the coach demonstrated his customary insight by dropping a remark which could serve as a formula for motivating a winner in any line. He made the familiar remark about the other team being "up," and then added, rather in a tone of an afterthought:

"But then, I guess we'd be disappointed if they weren't."

Cole Camp Five Beats Smithton Tuesday 61-53

Cole Camp defeated Smithton 61-53 Tuesday night, each team having a pair of high scorers who carried on their own private battle for points while the teams were amassing their totals.

Freund of Cole Camp topped the four high pointers with 25, Fletcher of Smithton had 21 and Wilson of Cole Camp and Cook of Smithton each had 17 points.

Grabbing a lead in the early minutes, Cole Camp led all the way: 12-5 at the quarter, 22-21 at the half and 45-30 at the third-quarter mark.

In the volleyball game Cole Camp took the contest 25-15. Brauer was high for Cole Camp with 12 and Todd had six for the losers.

Tournament Dates Set At Madison Square Garden In March

NEW YORK (AP)—The National Invitation Basketball Tournament, oldest of the postseason tournaments, will be held in Madison Square Garden March 6, 8, 9, 11 and 13.

The dates were announced yesterday by the Metropolitan Intercollegiate Basketball Assn., which sponsors the 12-team event.

Lincoln Takes 4-Point Win From Houstonia

The Lincoln basketball team invaded Houstonia Tuesday night and defeated Houstonia 53-49 in a game that was close all the way. High scorer for Lincoln was Wenig, with 17 points, while Lloyd Shireman scored high for Houstonia with 16.

In the girls' volleyball game, Houstonia drubbed Lincoln 37-8. Judy Blackburn, Houstonia, led the way with 11 points. Lincoln's top scorer was Rise, with three.

Houstonia will go to the Missouri Valley College gym Saturday night to take on Mercy Academy of Marshall. This will be the first time these two teams have met. The first game will start at 7:30 p. m.

Bobo Olson's Big Ambition Is to Retire Undeclared

SHORT RIGHT—Vincent Olson, 5, is learning that a good right-hand wallop might come in handy someday. At least his dad, middleweight champion Carl (Bobo) Olson, is forced to pull away. Olson has three other children.

By RUSS NEWLAND AP Newsfeatures

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—New middleweight boxing champion Carl (Bobo) Olson has dedicated himself to the double purpose of holding the title a long time and retiring undefeated.

Whether the mission will be accomplished remains to be seen. He is willing to fight any time his manager, Sid Flaherty, makes a match. The challengers' line forms to the right.

Bobo is strictly a family man. He has just purchased a home here, where his charming wife, Dolores, presides. The rest of the family are Carl Jr., a husky 7-year-old who is enrolled in a nearby public school. At home are Vincent, 4½, Brendalee, 3, and baby brother, Arthur Donald, age three months as of November.

Many boxers oppose a similar career for their children. Not the head of the Olson ring clan, Carl Jr., and Vincent love to box. They spar with each other and with their dad.

So far as Bobo is concerned, his boys can take up boxing as a career. And he will teach and train them.

Incidentally, all of the children are blond whereas the father and mother have brown hair. Mrs. Olson explains this is due to the fact that she was a natural platinum blonde before her hair turned.

Olson, 25, and his wife, 24, were reared in their native Honolulu. They lived only a few houses apart as children. They have no intention of returning to the islands except for visits. Bobo's father is a government employee in the Hawaiian metropolis.

The champ's home is some 10 blocks from the ocean beach, which makes an ideal place for him to carry out one phase of his conditioning program. He runs about six miles practically every morning, which accounts for his powerful legs. He now weighs between 165-167 pounds, about eight pounds over his fighting weight.

Except for boxing, Bobo never was much athletically inclined. He played some neighborhood football while attending St. Louis College, a prep school for children in Honolulu. But like most natives of the islands, he is an excellent swimmer. His wife proudly exclaims that he can stay

Let Scientist Hear Evidence Against Him

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis.), continuing a search for evidence of espionage at the Army Signal Corps Laboratories at Ft. Monmouth, N. J., recalled today a suspended civilian scientist to listen to testimony about himself.

The scientist is Aaron H. Coleman, 45, of Long Branch, N. J., who was suspended by the Army last September from his $9,600-a-year research job. Coleman, who said yesterday his position gave him access to secret material, at previous secret hearings had denied Communist or espionage activities.

In advance of today's hearing by the Senate investigations subcommittee he heads, McCarthy told newsmen he wanted Coleman "to hear more major testimony" about himself before returning to the witness chair.

The hearing is due to start at 11 a.m. EST.

The senators did not name those called to testify about Coleman.

McCarthy announced yesterday he will refer to the Justice Department, with a recommendation for a grand jury inquiry, a transcript of testimony by and about Coleman. He indicated he thought perjury had been committed.

In a brief appearance yesterday, Coleman affirmed the accuracy of testimony he had given at a secret subcommittee session in October. In it, he denied Communist ties or association at Ft. Monmouth in the 1940s with Julius Rosenberg, executed last summer for atomic spying.

Coleman then stepped aside and listened as Nathan Sussman of New York City testified he knew both Coleman and Rosenberg to have been members of the Young Communist League while students at the City College of New York (CCNY). Sussman said he also had been a member but later broke with communism.

The subcommittee counsel, Roy Cohn, read into the record an excerpt from testimony Rosenbergs gave at the trial which resulted in his conviction. In it Rosenberg mentioned "Mr. Aaron Coleman who, subsequent to graduation (from CCNY), I met at Ft. Monmouth."

The excerpt gave no details of any such meeting, and Coleman later told newsmen he had no recollection of it.

Cohn said at the hearing that Rosenberg's trial statement was "a direct, flat contradiction" of Coleman's testimony he had not met Rosenberg after their college days. McCarthy called it "testimony from the grave" and said it probably wouldn't be "admissible in a criminal action for perjury."

Peiping Radio Charges Allies Killed More Than 2,600 Prisoners

TOKYO (AP) — The Communist today reacted to Allied charges of Red atrocities in Korea by accusing American troops of killing more than 2,600 captured Chinese soldiers between November, 1950, and July, 1953.

The accusation came from the Peiping radio.

Behind Bamboo Curtain, Graft Buys Marx

VIP Visits Put Our Stock Up In Orient—Korea Puts It Down

By Fred Sparks NEA Staff Correspondent HANOI — Report From Behind the Nearby Bamboo Curtain: The old graft grabbers, as traditional in China as the pigtail, are back at lovely looting. For a short spell the Communists, insisting they were as pure as a reform candidate, managed to curb political pay-offs.

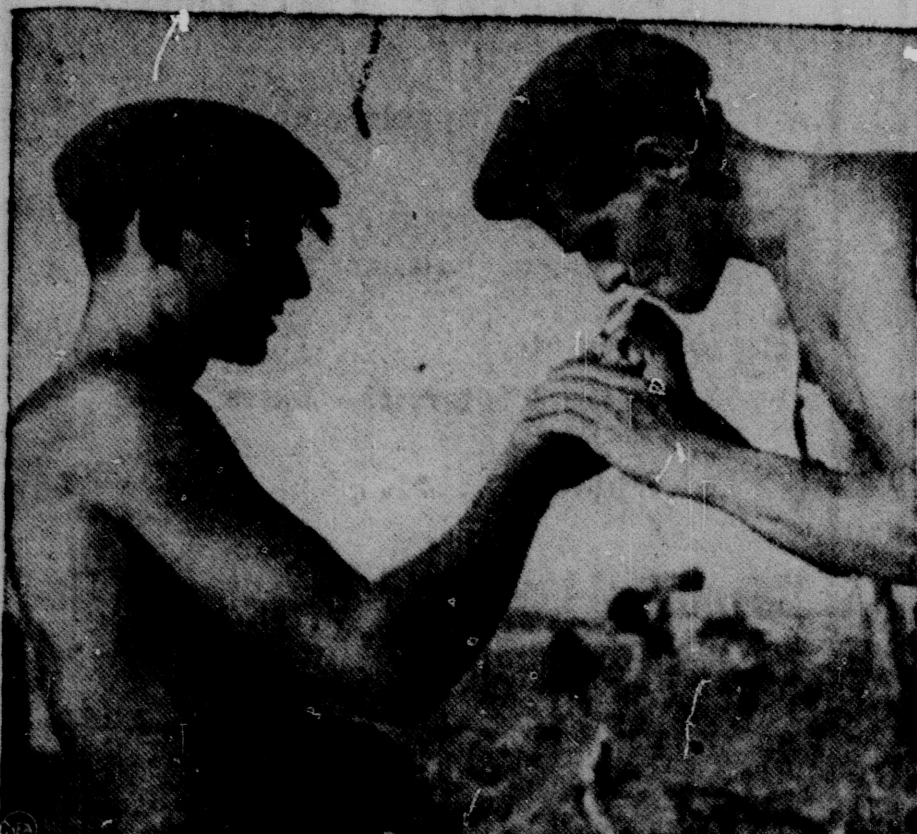

Item: Students can't enjoy higher education without "A" in Marx as well as Math. A few crisp Chinese bills, slipped into principal's tunic, will rocket the report-card of the most "reactionary" child.

Item: Farmers are supposed to turn all rice into a public bin for re-distribution on a community basis. The wise ones keep three bowls for themselves, give one to the state—and one to Honorable Inspector.

Item: Banditry in the highlands, which began in Confucius' Day, continues. And in an equally ancient dodge Federal soldiers convey only business trucks whose boss greased proper political palms.

U.S. stock in the Orient report: Up: Veep Nixon's junket—following Adlai Stevenson's needs U. S. prestige. During Dean Acheson's Day, even the State Department only sent second raters to the Far East. Today's traveling Big Names convince our friends the U. S. will not let China gobble all this geography.

Down: Our failure to win the Korean War and present inability to pin down a political conference waters our stock. Our friends have not yet recovered from fact that U. S. long regarded East of Suez as powerful enough to conquer the moon, couldn't wallow a poorly clad native army. for our policies—from Jakarta to Japan.

BATHING SUIT WAR: Countless French Legionnaires battle Indo-China's Reds—and jungle heat—in "uniforms" like these.

Up: Biggest asset is still American industrial genius—not government. In a world where even a cigarette lighter is a mechanical marvel, locals gobble up magazines describing in detail simplest U. S. wares like electric blankets, tape recorders, automobiles and pre-fabricated homes.

There are a billion potential customers out this way—current minus currency. "Made In U. S. A." is a gilt-edged trademark for our goods—if not yet
